UAW Backs Reuther in First Battle With Leftists

Test Vote Points To Clean Sweep In Election of Officers, Board

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 9.—In the first test vote on the opening day of the CIO United Auto Workers annual convention, supporters of President Walter P. Reuther snowed under his opposition.

The vote, on an issue in itself fairly inconsequential, nevertheless suggested that affairs in America's largest union are finally beginning to run Reuther's way.

It seemed a reasonable prediction that, after 18 months of being stopped dead in his tracks by an executive board and a panel of other union officers weighed against him, the fiery little redhead was about to win a clean sweep.

The decision will come on Tuesday, when the 2000 delegates representing 900,000 members, will vote on a new slate of officers. It appeared that Reuther would probably be unopposed for the presidency. In this event, the major contests will be for the officers of the secretary-treasurer and the two vice presidents.

Reuther Victory Expected

Reuther, heading what is generally known as the right-wing faction of the union, is already virtually conceded a victory in a later election of an executive board. For the past year and one half, that body has been stacked against him by a ratio of about 14 to 8.

Today's vote was on the timing of the election of officers. The Reuther group was eager to get it it over with as soon as possible, so that some of the factionalism which has plagued the UAW's history could be minimized for the remainder of the week-long convention.

The so-called left-wing group, headed by Secretary-Treasurer George F. Addes, and Vice Presidents R. J. Thomas and Richard T. Leonard, had nothing to lose and possibly something to gain by delaying a decision.

But on a show of hands their forces were defeated by what looked to be a four-to-one or even five-to-one ratio. Needing 500 votes to obtain a recount on a roll call, they could barely muster 50 hands in favor of the idea.

Fight to Continue

Elated as they were by the first test of strength, Reuther's supporters nevertheless showed no signs of taking it easy. And at the same time the Addes-Thomas-Leonard group indicated they had not given up the fight.

From the instant the convention began, with a local union band appropriately playing "A-Fightin' and A-Feurin' and A-Fussin'," both sides kept up a barrage of propaganda and campaigning.

In a heated speech, Reuther

Beauty Confesses 'Murder,' Then Says It's a Hoax

Chicago, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—A beautiful, blue-eyed blonde said today she just was trying to satisfy her curiosity when she told police she had murdered her sweetheart.

"I wanted to see how police would act when a good-looking woman confessed a murder," she said. "I didn't really kill anyone."

The girl, Mrs. Jean E. McCleary, 18, Ferndale, Mich., walked into central police station last night and told Desk Sergeant Harold Enright she had stabbed to death her sweetheart in a downtown hotel.

She said she was suffering from amnesia. But she remembered that she was married and that her sweetheart "Eddie" was married, too.

"He threatened to go back to his wife, so I picked up some scissors and stabbed him," she said.

She was held for a mental examination.

7 Discharged State Employe... Promised Civil Service Hearin...

Seven employes recently discharged by the State Department as "potential security risks" without specific charges and without a chance to resign, were promised hearings by the Civil Service Commission yesterday.

Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Commission, said the cases of those who file official appeals will be reviewed by the Commisison's Board of Appeals and Reviews as soon as possible.

Mitchell's assurance was given as two of the seven employes were appearing anonymously on a broadcast over WINX and WINX-FM to protest their loyalty to their Government on Ed Hart's program, "Is Congress Doing It's Job?"

Arnold on Program

On the program with them was Thurman Arnold, former Assistant United States Attorney General, who with Paul Porter, former Price Administrator, and Abe Fortas, former Undersecretary of Interior, is serving as counsel to the discharged men.

Commissioner Mitchell said "only one or two" of the discharged workers have so far filed official appeals.

While promising hearings as soon as possible (as early as next week if all the evidence can be made available), Mitchell pointed out that the hearings at most can result only in clearing the employes for jobs in other Government agencies.

The employes cannot be re-instated in their former jobs since the State Department is free under the so-called "McCarran Rider" to its appropriation to discharge anyone it wishes for loyalty or security reasons without stating the charges.

Charges Are Sought

Fortas said he and his associates hope to confer with State Department officials today to learn whether the department will furnish the charges upon which hearings could be held.

Secretary of State George C. Marshall, who has refused to give the men hearing and also has rejected an appeal that they be allowed to resign without prejudice, said last Wednesday that he was not able to give the men specific charges because they were based "on highly classified material not under its (the State Department's) control."

Secretary Marshall, however, promised to give the Civil Service Commission for its hearings all information under State Department control and J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, has announced that he will make available to the Commission all pertinent information in the FBI files.

There apparently was still some Blind Baby's Mother Told Right Way

Family 'Know-How'

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

"My baby doesn't reach out for toys like other babies," the mother said.

He was a blind baby, born that way, in a family where there already was one child, entirely normal.

His mother was not prepared to cope with the blind child's needs and she approached the Family Service Association, a Community Chest agency, for help.

They told her what to do about the toy problem. A blind baby will reach out for toys like any other baby, once he is taught how. His trouble is that he has never seen anyone reach for anything. If his arm is lifted to the toy a few times while the toy is rattled in front of him, he will develop the reflex action which comes more naturally to other babies.

As the baby grew, the mother had other problems. Why does the baby cry before he finishes his cereal? What is wrong? The FSA explained: The consistency is different, which brings a special problem for a blind infant.

First, the baby gets mostly cereal, but when he gets down near the bottom of the cereal bowl, his spoon touches mostly milk, and the difference in the feel of it makes it hard for him to get anything on his spoon. So the mother adds more cereal, or uses less milk in the cereal.

Then there comes the problem of the baby's schooling. How will he get along with other children, who are not so afflicted? What kind of school can educate him? And the FSA advises on schools where blind children can receive educations just as thorough as that which the normal child receives.

The mother was worried about having any more children. Would they, too, be born blind? Then the cause of the baby's blindness had to be established. Some blindness is congenital, other blindness is not. The FSA suggested proper agencies to make such tests. They also helped to establish a normal relationship between the blind

Rededication To Veterans' Ideals Urged

Armistice Sunday Rites Observed at Scores of Churches

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Pleas for rededication to American war veterans' spiritual ideals were voiced yesterday at "Armistice Sunday" services in the Greater Washington area.

Rites were centered at the Unknown Solider's Tomb at Arlington; Ritchie Coliseum at the University of Maryland, and in scores of Catholic and Protestant churches.

The Rev. George E. Gingras, assistant pastor of St. France de Sales Parish, Woodridge, and former Army chaplain, told 400 worshipers at a military field mass at Maryland University that "A Christ-like home is the molding place for a Christ-like America."

Father Gingras said many types of homes today where there is quarreling and bickering are not the homes that our servicemen dreamed of returning to, and fighting to preserve. "Many have not learned what they (the servicemen) sacrificed to learn," he said.

The Prince Georges County Council, Knights of Columbus, sponsored the mass, which was celebrated by the Very Rev. John diMatteo, superior of the St. John de Maltha House of Studies, Catholic University. Members of Prince Georges County American Legion Posts formed the color-guard.

DoctorsForbidden, Little Girl Dies Of Meningitis

Greybull, Wyo., Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Frances June Baker, 4, died last night after a 10-day illness during which her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Baker, refused to permit doctors to treat the child, declaring they would rely on the Lord to cure her.

Dr. L. F. Allison, public health officer, pronounced the child dead of spinal meningitis. The Baker home, in which there are two other children, was placed under quarantine yesterday.

Baker, a naval veteran, told reporters "We're looking to the Lord to cure Frances June." He said he and his wife did not belong to any church, but believed in "the Lord's promises in the Bible."

Planes Tracked by Radar

Thousands See Washington 'Defended' From Air Attack

The National Guard's 113th Fighter Group defended the Nation's Capital yesterday from an "enemy" air fleet of "attacking" bombers over the Washington Monument as thousands watched the action from the Monument Grounds.

It was the first step-by-step demonstration of interception defense given in public, according to the guardsmen.

Spectators were able to follow the military operation by "listening in" to radio messages from the time that outlying radar stations picked up the score of A-26 bombers winging in over Delaware Bay, to their interception by 32 P-47s in the clear autumn air some 4000 feet above the crowd.

The attacking bombers were units of the Cleveland, Ohio, and Birmingham, Ala., National Guard. As they headed toward Washington in the midafternoon, the 260th Battalion Group of the District Guard manned a mobile radar unit in the city and three fixed radar stations, part of the local warning network, tracking the invaders.

Twelve minutes after the first radar report was heard over loudspeakers at the Monument Grounds, the area was "alerted" and one minute later the 113th Fighter Group took off from Andrews Field. Meanwhile, the progress of the "enemy" planes, followed through constant radar observation reports which came over the loudspeakers at the Monument Grounds, was also tracked on a large map for the benefit of the audience.

Fourteen minutes after Maj. Arthur E. Kimberlay, commanding the 113th Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron, had given the alert the "attackers" flowed over

...ns Deal Clarification

May Go on Stand Today, Sharing Spotlight With Ex-Air General

By The Associated Press

Airplane-maker Howard Hughes, who can throw a Senate investigation into an uproar, wants to clarify "many questions" and details about his wartime plane contracts when he takes the witness stand, perhaps today.

Sharing the spotlight is Bennett E. Meyers, retired Air Forces general who has denied testimony that he tried to borrow $50,000 from Hughes during the war when Meyers was in position to rule on a Hughes photo-plane contract—but has said that Hughes tried in 1944 to get him to take a job after the war, naming his own salary.

Chairman Ferguson (R., Mich.) of the Senate War Investigating subcommittee said one or the other would testify first as the committee transfers its hearings into smaller quarters—away from the huge Senate caucus room where European aid committees will begin sitting today.

The probe of Hughes' 40 million dollars worth of wartime airplane contracts moved down a corridor to a crowded banking committee room. Scores who have been flocking to the Hughes hearings probably must stand outside.

Hughes told reporters he must wait until he gets in the witness chair to testify about General Meyers' claim that Hughes had offered him a job during the war and told the general "to write my own ticket."

"That will have to rest on McCarthy's testimony for now," Hughes said.

He referred to Neil S. McCarthy, lawyer and former Hughes officials whose testimony, read to the committee, said General Meyers asked Hughes for a $50,000 loan during the war. McCarthy said Hughes refused this as "improper."

The retired general already has specifically denied seeking the wartime loan, but testified about seeking—and being refused—a $50,000 loan from Hughes earlier this year after he retired from the Army.

Backed Up By Wife

Meyers also insisted—and his young and pretty wife backed him up—that Mrs. Meyers repaid $900 of hotel and travel costs, for a California trip, to Johnny W. Meyer, Hughes' publicity man who entertained a number of Army and Government officials dealing with aircraft procurement. Meyer denied receiving the money.

Grinning broadly after Saturday's hearings brought some friendly testimony, Hughes said he had "many questions" and details to clarify when he gets on the stand.

Hughes last appeared before Ferguson's group last summer during the first phase of its inquiry into his deals with the Government for construction of the world's largest cargo plane and a speedy photo reconnaissance ship. At that time, he dealt in an explosion of charges and countercharges with Senator Brewster (R., Me.) chairman of the full War Investigating Committee.

The Washington Post Poll

Danger of Red Expansion Dominates D. C. Aid Opinion

The threat of Communist expansion in Europe is the predominant factor considered by Washingtonians in forming an opinion on the Marshall Plan, the latest Post Poll reveals.

In the majority group in favor of further aid for Europe, 65 per cent believe the Communists will take over if we do not send more help. Fourteen per cent of this same group are not alarmed by a Communist threat, and 21 per cent are undecided.

Of those opposing more help for Europe, 37 per cent see no threat of Communist expansion, but 28 per cent say they believe the Communists will gain the upper hand if American aid does not reach Europe. Undecided are 35 per cent.

If United States aid is cut off, 44 out of a hundred of the "No Aid" group believe the Europeans will stop relying on us to solve their problems, and will go to work themselves.

But only seven out of a hundred of the strongest supporters of United States aid to Europe feel the Europeans will somehow solve their own problems. Thirty per cent of the "Aid" group think there will be starvation and disease failing more United States assistance, while others say there will be revolution and rioting, planting of the seeds for the next international war, and other dire political, economic and moral results.

The majority (61 per cent) of those opposed to aiding Europe also feel that the economy of the United States will not suffer in the event that Europe is unable to buy from us.

In contrast, 51 per cent who are willing to make personal sacrifices to send aid abroad believe that the eventual effect on our own economy will be serious if Europe is unable to trade with us.

These findings of The Post Poll are based on personal interviews with a representative cross-section of adults living in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Local residents were asked:

"If the U. S. doesn't send more help, what do you think will happen in Europe?"

(Last Monday The Post Poll reported the findings on the two questions: "Would you personally be willing to do without some of the goods and food you would normally buy in the next few years to send them abroad?" And "Would you be willing to ration some things in this country to send them abroad?" Fifty-four per cent were both willing to do without normal purchases and willing to ration to send food abroad. City Workers Drop 6-Day Paris Strike

Filth Turns Public Against Walkout; Anti-Inflation Steps Start Prices Down

By William Attwood

Paris, Nov. 9.—Paris public service workers voted today to end a six-day strike that had reduced the city's water supply and left its streets littered with garbage. They will return to work tomorrow morning.

The vote, almost unanimous, came at a mass meeting held this morning to study compromise proposals made public yesterday by Premier Paul Ramadier.

These proposals did not meet the strikers' demands for immediate wage increases, but accorded them advance bonuses and promised to take up the wage question in the National Assembly within two weeks.

Although the agreement was hailed as a victory for the strikers by this morning's Communist and left-wing press, and as a government "abdication" by right-wing papers, the gist of Ramadier's proposals was that he deftly passed the buck to the assembly, which will have to debate the question of raises for all civil servants.

Part of the eagerness with which the strikers accepted the compromise stems from the fact that public opinion was turning against them after five days of grimy streets, trickling faucets and dirty linen in municipal hospitals.

The government's obligations to granting increases, which are on the whole justified by higher living costs, are due to its current drive to check inflation and save the franc.

Part of this drive, aimed at keeping down food prices, appears to have succeeded, at least temporarily. This morning the Socialist newspaper, "Le Populaire," announced in a banner headline that "despite widespread grumbling, prices have gone down!"

Hospital Priority Plan Urged By Md. Survey Group

Baltimore, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—A priority plan for allocating Federal Hospital construction funds to Maryland institutions was advocated today in a report by the State Planning Commission's hospital survey committee.

The priority system was recommended, the committee said, because Maryland stands to get $870,300 yearly from the Federal Government, yet the State needs 9208 additional general, tuberculosis, chronic disease and mental hospital beds.

The committee gave A-1 priority to 374 general hospital beds in four "rural" and two "intermediate" areas. The rural areas are Garrett, 46 beds; Calvert, 26 beds; Worcester, 60 beds, and Kent-Queen Annes, 38 beds. The intermediate areas are Washington County, 112 beds, and Talbot-Caroline, 92 beds.

After general hospital beds, these facilities would have next access to Federal funds: tuberculosis beds for Negroes, 137; chronic disease hospital beds, 330; mental hospital beds for white patients, 315; mental hospital beds for Negroes, 84; and tuberculosis hospital beds for white patients, 67.

The State plan is subject to approval of the Surgean General of the United States. It will be given a hearing next month.

Ex-Dictator of Siam Seizes Reins Without Firing a Gun

Songgram Promises Coalition Regime to Save Nation From Ruin

Bangkok, Siam, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Pibul Songgram, who was dictator from 1938 to 1944 and collaborated with the Japanese war machine, returned to power as Siam's "strong man" today after a bloodless coup.

The 55-year-old former field marshal, overthrowing with army aid the government of Premier Thamrong Nawasuwat, announced he would set up a coalition government "to save my country from ruin."

Songgram escaped probable trial on war crimes charges at the war's end when the Supreme Court ruled that arrests on such allegations were unconstitutional. Less than two years ago he was scorned by many Siamese as a collaborator who allowed the Japanese to use Siam as a base for the 1942 conquest of Singapore and Malaya. His coup, however, left the country outwardly quiet. Some Siamese recalled his restrictive prewar regime, but others saw his coup as a possible end to what they regarded as an era of corruption.

It was the second successful revolution in Songgram's career. In 1932 he overthrew Siam's absolute monarchy and compelled King Prajadhipok to accept a constitutional monarchy.

U. S., Russia Still Far Apart On Palestine

America Expected To Reject Canadian Compromise Proposal

By Robert Manning

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 9 (U.P.).—American - Russian disagreement over Palestine partition hardened tonight with a report that the United States would reject a Canadian compromise plan.

The report was not officially confirmed, but American officials were known to feel that the Canadian plan ranged too far from the original American suggestions for keeping the Palestine problem out of the United Nations Security Council barring active international aggression, while Britain terminates its mandate and two independent states take shape.

American officials disclosed, meanwhile, they would await an official verdict from the British cabinet on the American proposals before sitting down with the Russians for an eleventh-hour try at compromising the conflicting American and Russian proposals.

American delegates asked British delegates on Thursday to cable to London for the cabinet's "yes" or "no" to the American plan, with its provision that Britain bear responsibility for transforming Palestine into two states.

Americans said they were ready for a weekend compromise huddle of American and Russian Palestine delegates, together with the compromise-proposing delegates of Canada and Guatemala.

Russian officials indicated, however, that they either had the in-

Lewis Douglas, United States Ambassador to Britain, arrived by plane yesterday from London.

Tired after the long overseas trip, Douglas went straight to bed.

Before leaving London, he told reporters he had been summoned home unexpectedly for consultations with President Truman on the European aid program.

An informed source in Moscow said yesterday that Ambassador W. Bedell Smith probably would make a brief trip to Washington in connection with the special session of Congress beginning November 17. Several high officials of the State Department said today, however, they knew of no plans for Smith to return home.

80% Fewer Cattle

Drought Cuts Million Bushels From '48 Wheat in Southwest

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Amarillo, Tex., Nov. 9.—The deeper one gets into the Southwestern wheat belt, the more one is impressed with the seriousness of the dry-weather threat to next year's wheat and meat supplies, and its implications to the Nation's foreign program.

It is safe to predict that next year's wheat crop will fall 100 million bushels in the Texas-Oklahoma area alone, under this year's all-time record.

Federal Reserve predictions are that the cattle supply from this great cattle-growing country will be only 20 to 30 per cent of this year's production.

To a country wrestling now with a shortage of grain to meet demands from abroad, this is little less than calamity.

Seasoned observers assert that even with the best of growing conditions, it will be impossible to raise a normal crop. An average crop runs 20 million bushels in the Texas Panhandle—this year it was 115 million.

Dave Rascoe, farm expert on the Amarillo Globe, declared: "Our only chance for any crop is rain, and quick—to get the wheat out of the ground. The forecast is continued dry.

"A lot of growers are now dusting in their wheat as a last resort."

The rainfall deficiency is now 6.24 inches—a whale of a lot in a country where normal is only 19.54. Practically none has fallen since July 1.

The same situation extends north into Kansas, where this reporter will visit Monday and Tuesday.

Austrian View

Protection By U. N. Seen As 'Illusion'

Vienna, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—Dr. Karl Gruber, Austrian Foreign Minister, said today in a signed newspaper editorial that it was a "dangerous illusian" for small nations to expect effective protection from the United Nations in its present form.

Gruber called on Austrians to establish a common front that would resist what he described as Communist infiltration in Austria.

"This way we will not have to appeal to the big powers—an appeal which could only be for armed help," he wrote in the Wiener Tageszeitung, organ of the Peoples Party.

"It is imperative that counteractions against undemocratic developments (in our country) must be launched at the earliest possible date and not in the final phase, when only a bloody fight could possibly show results."

He declared it was impossible to "tiptoe" in political resistance to to communism, and said the recently organized Cominform "does not recognize halfway friends. Whoever refuses to march with them is considered an enemy.

Another "dangerous illusion," Gruber said, was to believe that the three-power Moscow declaration of 1943 establishing Austria as a free and independent state was anything but "a basis for pretexts to deprive Austria of her right to appoint her political leaders and to formulate her own policy."

First Request For Stopgap Aid Goes to 'Hill' Today

Marshall to Lay Europe's Winter Needs Before Joint Committee Session

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Congress will get its first official requests today for stopgap help to tide western Europe over the coming winter.

A joint meeting of the Senate and House committees on foreign policy will be asked to authorize the spending of more than a billion dollars until the long-range "Marshall Plan" can come into operation.

Secretary Marshall plans to testify on behalf of a 642-million-dollar authorization to avert what he called "intolerable hunger and cold" in France and Italy.

The committees will also be asked to authorize a 400-million-dollar deficiency program for added costs in the occupation of Germany. This item will include about 150 million for added expenses caused by high American prices and about 250 million for taking over British dollar obligations in the western zones.

In addition, a comparatively small amount between 20 and 30 million will be sought for winter relief in Austria.

To Review Background

Secretary Marshall's statement will review the economic and political background in western Europe which, in the Administration's opinion, made the special session of Congress necessary.

The two committees will not be asked to deal with the longer-term European recovery program, although the Secretary will be able to give them a general picture of the problem and of the work done within the Administration in recent months to meet it.

The Administration's detailed estimates of the long-term recovery needs are not yet ready, and President Truman said on Thursday that he would not submit recommendations for the four-year recovery program until later in the special session or early in the regular session in January.

The congressional committees will, however, have the reports of the Krug, Nourse and Harriman committees before them as background information for their decisions on stop-gap aid.

To Maintain Pipe-Line

The supplies to be sought for France include not only wheat and coal, but also some petroleum and petroleum products, seed and fertilizer, and industrial raw materials to keep the "pipe-line" to France full enough for French factories to operate.

Supplies needed for Italy will be roughly similar, except that Italy now has peso credits from Argentina so that it is not entirely dependent on dollars for its wheat imports. The Italians have run out of dollars so quickly, however, that half of the 285 million dollars earmarked for them will be needed before January 1 and the remainder before March 31.

If the precedent of the Greek-Turkish aid program is followed, the Administration may ask for permission to have the Reconstruction Finance Corporation advance

Restaurants Saving Food, Official Says

Program Depends On Cooperation Of Customers

Satisfaction with the role restaurants are playing in conserving food for shipment overseas was expressed yesterday by Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association.

"We feel we are saving a considerable amount of food," Wilson said in reporting that most restaurants are cooperating in the program.

Restaurants can do no more, though, if the public will let them, Wilson said.

Cooperation Essential

"Since it is a voluntary program we are dependent upon the cooperation of our customers. It is hard for a restaurant owner to hold the line on a meatless day if a customer demands meat and threatens to go elsewhere if he doesn't get it."

Wilson praised the individual restaurant employe, who not only must persuade the customer to eat a meat substitute, but who by "just being careful" is making "great contributions to the program."

"Serving less bread and putting no more on a plate than a customer will eat is a big help," Wilson said.

Poultry Ruling Approved

The restaurant association spokesman said that owners and managers are "delighted" that "poultryless Thursday" has been abandoned.

Fowl, he pointed out, is one of the main substitutes for high-priced meat.

The Citizens Food Committee announced the end of "poultryless days" last Friday but urged the public to continue to keep Thursdays "eggless."

Cabinet Shuffle

Reds Move To Control Slovakia

Prague, Nov. 9 (AP).—Reports from Bratislava said today that the number of Slovak Democrats in the Cabinet of semi-autonomous Slovakia might be slashed from eight to two in the reshuffling now being undertaken by Communist Premier Klement Gottwald.

Gottwald has authority from the Czech Cabinet to attempt to solve the crisis in Slovakia brought about by the resignation of six Communist ministers. The Communists insisted the Slovak Cabinet be reorganized to admit representatives of resistance veterans and other pro-Communist groups. The eight ministers of the Slovak Democrats, the dominant party in Slovakia, refused to resign. They were the target for bitter attacks by Gottwald.

Gottwald wound up a series of conferences in Bratislava with party leaders. He is expected to appear before the national Cabinet Tuesday to ask approval of a new slate in Slovakia.

Reports from Bratislava, capital of Slovakia, said that only the Slovak democratic ministers of justice and communications might retain their posts and it was a foregone conclusion that the justice post would go to a Communist or Communist sympathizer.

Gottwald's grant of authority from the national cabinet was regarded as another step in Communist moves to gain a complete upper hand in the Czech government.

The situation in Slovakia has already had repercussions in the national government. President Edouard Benes last week accepted the resignation of Deputy Premier Jan Ursiny, a Slovak Democrat, who had been criticized by the Communists after his secretary was linked with an alleged anti-government plot in Slovakia.

Buenos Aires Rioters Stop Socialist Rally

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—Youthful rioters throwing stones and firing into the air, broke up a Socialist rally in downtown Buenos Aires last night.

The crowd, estimated at 2000, tried at first to resist the attack but disbanded when the rioters started shooting. Police arrested three of the youths, who were believed to be members of the right-ist Nationalist Liberty Alliance.

5 of 6 Persons Questioned Believe That Europe Will Go Communistic Unless It Receives American Assistance

Bryson — Five of six persons questioned believe Europe will go Communist unless it receives American aid.

"The people of Europe will starve, I guess, "if the U. S. doesn't help, and Russia will get control of the smaller countries," said J. B. Bryson, 2007 H st. nw., a Government employe.

Bryson said he thought the U. S. is dependent upon Europe for trade "to a certain extent."

Miss Liebst — Miss Barbara Liebst, 340 Decatur st. nw., a secretary in Senator Capper's office, said, "I think Europe is going to be Communist whether we send help or not. It seems as if Russia is taking credit for the food whether it is from the United States or the Comintern," she believes, however, that "we owe it to the children of Europe to help them."

Mader — "There's no question about it," declared Lambert Mader, bookkeeper, of 4203 Russell ave., Mount Rainier, "Europe will be communistic if we don't help it. Communism thrives in troubled times.

"I think our economy is set up in such a way that we have to have a lot of foreign trade," he added. "We should help Europe as much as we can; individual aid is not enough to tide it over."

Miss Hopkins — Miss Priscilla Hopkins, 1801 N. Hartford, Arlington, a business college student, declared "I don't think there is going to be much Europe left if we don't help. A lot will die of starvation, and more people will be killed in riots."

"If the Communists give aid, they may take over," she said. "They have pretty much of Europe now. I don't think trade is an immediate problem," she stated.

Jones — "I think Europe will go into a worse depression than ever without help," said O. E. Jones, 1306 R st. nw., a Government employe, "and there will be starvation and totalitarianism."

Jones said he believed that Europe's inability to buy American goods would also cause a depression here. "I think we should aid Europe with due consideration to the folks here at home," he added.

Reynolds — Mrs. Anna J. Reynolds, 815 N. Jefferson st., Arlington, said she doubted that the United States can give much material help.

"I think the danger of communism is over-rated," she asserted. Asked if she thought the U. S. would suffer without European trade, she pointed out that distance doesn't mean much any more, and added "no country under present conditions can operate alone."

Persons interviewed by The Washington Post Poll were assured their names and addresses would not be divulged. Opinions expressed here were obtained in spot interviews with others in the downtown area.

Red Peril Tops Aid Opinion

three per cent were unwilling to send any aid.)

Replies of all Washingtonians to this question are contrasted with those of the group giving strongest support to the Marshall Plan, and those who are opposed to aiding Europe. Not shown are the replies of intermediate groups.

Consequences of Not Sending More Aid	All Groups	Of those who are All Out for U. S. Aid	Of those who are Opposed to U. S. Aid
Starvation, disease, death	24%	30%	12%
Russia or Communists will take over	19	24	12
They'll manage somehow; will have to go to work themselves	17	7	44
Revolution, riot, unrest	15	19	6
Seeds of another international war	6	9	2
Economic collapse	4	4	1
Trend toward totalitarianism	3	4	..
Delay in rehabilitation	2	3	1
Things will be much as they are now	3	2	7
Other consequences (lowering of moral, religious standards; lowering of standard of living; hatred of American people, etc.)	10	13	6
Don't know what will happen	13	8	25

(Adds to more than 100 per cent because more than one answer was possible.)

Many of the "No Aid" group who think there will be starvation, disease, and death in Europe failing more United States aid, indicate that we have similar conditions in this country which should receive first attention.

And when members of this group say the Communists will take over, they sometimes add remarks such as, "If that's what the people want, it's none of our business."

Post Pollers then asked the direct question:

"Some people say that if we don't send more help, the Communists will take over. Do you think this is true?"

Here are the answers:

	All Groups	Of those who are All Out for U. S. Aid	Of those who are Opposed to U. S. Aid
Believe the Communists will take over	50%	65%	28%
Do not believe in the Communist threat	22	14	37
Undecided	28	21	35

Comments of skeptics concerning the reality of the Communist threat in western Europe, frequently indicate disbelief of what they read in the papers, or the feeling that this threat has been blown up to get support for the plan.

Post Pollers were asked finally:

"If European countries are not able to buy from us, do you think the U. S. can get along all right, or will it be a serious thing for us?"

The replies:

	All Groups	Of those who are All Out for U. S. Aid	Of those who are Opposed to U. S. Aid
We'll get along all right without the European market	44%	34%	61%
Eventually the effects on the U. S. economy will be serious	42	51	26
Undecided	14	15	13

Comments of those who are all out for U. S. aid often indicate their belief that it is One World, and that U. S. prosperity depends on world prosperity, while the group opposed to U. S. aid repeatedly comment that we can sell all our goods in this country or South America.

Clothes for Europe

Relief Rally Planned by Adventists

A thousand Seventh-Day Adventist young people of the Washington area will participate in a relief-for-Europe rally Friday in the Takoma Park Adventist Church, Carroll and Willow aves.

Scheduled at 7:30 p. m., the rally will precede a campaign Saturday and Sunday in Takoma Park and Silver Spring to get winter clothing for immediate shipment to Europe.

Conditions in Europe will be described at the rally by church leaders who recently have returned from abroad. Dr. Devoe Meade of the Washington Sanitarium and Hospital staff, head of the campaign, will be master of ceremonies. Others on the program include Miss Jewel Hatcher and Dick Harris, youth leaders.

"Young folks will ring every doorbell in the Takoma Park-Silver Spring area," Dr. Meade said. "They will not accept clothing, but will merely take addresses at which articles may be collected. Later in the week, a truck will call at those places."

Children from the denomination's two elementary schools in Takoma Park—the J. N. Andrews and Sligo schools—will visit homes in their vicinities, and older participants will go to Silver Spring.

'Hill' Gets Aid Appeal Today

some of the money for Italy before actual appropriations can be made.

Chairman H. Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) has called his Senate Appropriations Committee together for next Monday, but Chairman John Taber (R., N. Y.) has not yet called a meeting of his Appropriations Committee in the House.

Today's meeting will be in executive session. This will give Secretary Marshall more freedom than he otherwise would have to discuss the political situation in France and Italy.

In some ways the position has become more critical since it first became evident here that stopgap help would have to precede the "Marshall Plan" recovery program.

The Communists in both countries have declared open war on the American recovery program, and have impeded production by strikes and demonstrations. In France they took a beating at the hands of Gen. Charles de Gaulle in the municipal elections, but they are still exploiting French resentment at the bread ration of 200 grams a day, which is smaller than the ration in western Germany.

Officials here feel more strongly than ever that it is crucial to keep food and fuel moving to France and Italy this winter, without letting the lack of dollars interrupt the flow.

Connally Would Have State Dept. Direct Aid

Senator Tom Connally of Texas, ranking Democratic member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, last night advocated that the State Department supervise the foreign economic recovery program.

He said that since the program was closely tied in with United States foreign policy, a single director of foreign aid should be appointed to report to the President through the State Department.

Drought Cuts Million Bushels From '48 Wheat in Southwest

sign of life for miles at a stretch are depressing, and carry the threat of a serious upset to both our domestic and foreign economy.

Cattle, ordinarily pasturing on the green wheat, are missing. As an indication of how farmers, unable to graze their livestock on the usually lush-growing wheat, are rushing their herds to market was given in a report of the tenth Federal Reserve Bank at Kansas City yesterday.

Slaughter Up 86 Per Cent

Laying the blame entirely on the poor wheat prospects, the bank reports that cattle slaughter for the first nine months this year is up 86 per cent above last year, due to sharply increased marketings by farmers facing a shortage of feed for the winter.

"Beef is being eaten much faster than it is being produced," the report says. The major threat to next year's meat supply lies in the fact that only about 20 per cent as many cattle will be fed on winter wheat pasturage as a year ago.

Because of the short corn crop, and high prices of grain, winter feeding in the Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Kansas and Nebraska fattening pens also is expected to be much lower.

One hope of many is that Monday's crop report by the Department of Agriculture will show an improvement in the short corn crop. The hot, dry weather that has ruined wheat for next year has been a godsend to corn growers. Grain men are looking with anxious eyes toward the November 10 report.

They are becoming more concerned here, also, about the danger of a recurrence of the dust bowl of the 1930s.

"There has been a lot of plowing of marginal lands that shouldn't be done," Roscoe said. Much should have been left as range, but the high prices for wheat have led a lot of men into the gamble.

"Many are showing utter disregard for safe and sane conservation measures. A lot of the boys have pretty short memories."

Many assume a fatalistic attitude. June Davis, a grower and dealer at Amarillo, declared: "It looks like next year will be rugged. But the law of averages should call for not one, but two or three, short wheat crops."

If Davis is right, it is a prospect that should be taken into consideration by those planning our foreign relief program.

Byron Gist, one of the best known wheat men in these parts, who last year had 7000 acres of the golden grain, declared that a crop seeded this late has "not one chance in 50. The chances are very slim for anything near a normal yield," he said, a serious prediction in view of the fact that a normal yield could be from 50 to 100 million bushels under this year.

Farm Affluency Discounted

Some wheat planted early got out of the ground and then dried up "like powder" he said. Gist plans to fallow much of his land unless he can seed soon.

Some of the stories about the prosperity of the farmers are fantastic. Gist paid from $10 to $30 an acre for his land—and this year raised about 30 bushels of $3 wheat on an average.

Most farmers have paid off all their debts and have money—real money—in the bank. There is little farm speculation.

At the Amarillo Globe they told of a farmer who made $60,000 "by accident." He had planted wheat for pasturing—renting it to cattlemen for from $3 to $5 a month per head. After pasturing it to the usual limit he left the land to fallow. But despite the heavy pasturing the wheat flourished. He netted $60,000 from his harvest.

Food Conservation Belittled

Lifting of the ban on poultry on Thursdays just about ended the food conservation drive here. Saturday morning a coffee shop manager tore off the pledge of compliance with the President's program from each menu. "They don't know what they're doing," he said. "First they declare meatless Tuesday, and then remove all but four kinds of meat from the ban. Then they announce that poultryless and eggless days will remain, and suddenly lift the ban on poultry. From now on, we'll serve anything anyone wants." The Amarillo Globe called the situation "ridiculous."

The announcement reached Oklahoma City just as Governor Turner was emphasizing the necessity of poultryless days to the Oklahoma Farm Bureau.

The Oklahoma City Times received the announcement by declaring: "The cold truth about the program is that it's all over but the shouting."

U. S. Urged to Seek Pact Against War

Writer Proposes Agreement Under U. N. Of Nations Opposed to Red Aggression

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A "third way out" of the grim dilemma posed by the split between East and West and its fearful threat of atomic war was advanced yesterday.

The alternative to "one world or none" was proposed by Livingston Hartley, author and former U. S. Foreign Service officer, The Washington Post columnist and editorial director of the National Committee on Atomic Information. He warns that Russia "may be producing the atomic bomb by 1950" and that American cities are highly vulnerable to such attack.

In an article in the magazine Air Affairs, Hartley puts forward a plan for the United States to negotiate with other "free peoples" over the globe who are opposed to Communist aggression a regional security agreement under the United Nations to prevent atomic war.

'Active Partners' For U. S.

Such an agreement, under the plan, would create a "combined strategic board" with broad powers to take military action to combat any threat to the common security of the nations involved.

"It could provide the United States not only with friends but with active partners" he writes. "It could establish a nucleus for a final world federation. In the end it might solve the Russian problem by inclusion of the Russian people."

Hartley warns that:

1. Many millions of Americans believe in the "stark alternatives" of the phrase "one world or none" —that we must reach an agreement with Russia on atomic warfare or wait for world destruction. Yet the prospects of an agreement with the Soviets is fading.

Atomic Menace Stressed

2. While a solution of Europe's economic plight is the most immediate problem, we "cannot afford to lose sight now of the direct atomic menace to American cities which may arise in the next few years."

3. American industries "are heavily concentrated, one third of our people live in cities of over 50,000 population, and our democratic institutions render us particularly susceptible to an atomic Pearl Harbor."

But, while we are highly vulnerable to atomic attack, Hartley says, we have certain advantages if Russia begins to stockpile A-bombs. These, he says, are our headstart, our indusrial capacity, our superior air power and our Navy. They add up to the fact that American superiority in atomic strength would prevent an enemy starting war because of fear of retaliation.

Not Enough in Long Run

But this would not be enough in the long run, he declares. If we "sit in atomic isolation, contenting ourselves merely with being strong," Russia's greater and growing population, her industrial program, strong strategic position and ideological expansion drive, may outstrip up by 1970 or 1980.

Such resort to "atomic isolation" would end with Russia dominating all of Europe, Asia and Africa, and an eventual war in which we would be the underdogs, Hartley contends. In addition to strength, he says, we need friends linked in some form of a union.

But constitutional barriers against the United States giving sovereignty to an international union are in the way. Hartley suggests that the agreements be confined to security matters at first. Later, perhaps, it would extend to the fields of economic and political collaboration, he declares.

Such a combination would have its headquarters in the United States, and be "anchored in Western Germany," France and England, as well as in Japan and perhaps China, "on Russia's relatively weak flank."

"As a result," Hartley continues, "Russia could be surrounded by a world-wide combination of peoples collectively so strong that they would be very difficult to challenge in either the near or more distant future. With their great resources, moreover, they would be able to raise progressively their standards of living and exert a mounting pressure on non-participating peoples to join."

Advantages Are Cited

Such a combination would have these advantages, he states:

1. "Dispersion of offensive bases and combined productive efforts could produce an overwhelming atomic warfare superiority, perhaps in itself sufficient to insure the common security."

2. Armament costs should be lowered by pooling and specialization among the member nations. European nations could provide troops, the United States planes and other military equipment.

3. Pooling of intelligence facilities would keep the combined strategic board much better informed of what is going on in Russia than the United States is today.

Atom Agency Left Off U. S. Security Body

By The Associated Press

The new National Security Organization, established under the Armed Forces Unification Act, contains a high-ranking representative of every Government department concerned with defense—except the agency producing the Nation's No. 1 weapon, the atomic bomb.

Officials who were ask yesterday why the Atomic Energy Commission has no representative in the organization were not certain whether the situation was an oversight, involved some policy, or was a matter still awaiting decision.

One authority on the national defense setup said he thought it was still possible for President Truman to appoint an Atomic Energy Commission official to one of two top-level units of the National security organization, the National Security Resources Board. But, he added, he did not know whether this was being considered.

Congress Not Specific

It was pointed out that Congress did not specifically provide for atomic commission representation, but that the section establishing the resources board directed appointment of a chairman and such heads or representatives of Government agencies as the President might designate. He has made only one appointment, that of Board Chairman Arthur M. Hill. David E. Lilienthal is chairman of the five-man Atomic Energy Commission.

The National Security Council, the other major agency of the National Security organization responsible directly to the President, is composed of the Secretaries of Defense, State, Army, Navy, Air and the chairman of the Resources Board. The function of the Security Council is to integrate domestic, foreign and military policies in relation to National Security; that of the Resources Board to coordinate military, industrial and civilian mobilization.

The present direct contact between the national defense organization and the Atomic Commission is through a military liaison committee of six Army, Navy and Air officers, whose functions are consultation and recommendation.

31 Survivors Of Schooner Arrive in N. Y.

New York, Nov. 9 (AP). — The Army hospital ship Charles A. Stafford arrived here today with 31 Portuguese seamen rescued in the storm-tossed North Atlantic last Tuesday by a volunteer lifeboat crew from the Stafford.

Capt. Gunnar Van Rosen, master of the hospital ship, an amateur painter, proudly displayed an oil painting in which he portrayed the scene as his men ferried fishermen from the stricken, three-masted schooner Maria Carlota.

Among the men shown at the oars of the rescue boat was Prudencio Camacho, 31, a seaman on the Stafford, who four years ago served as mate aboard the Maria Carlotta.

The Maria Carlotta radioed at 1 p. m. (EST) November 4 that she was in a sinking condition, her decks almost awash and two pumps, one of them hand operated, working to keep her afloat.

The Coast Guard sent rescue craft and the British liner Queen Elizabeth left its course to go to the aid of the stricken vessel but the Stafford, closest to the scene, reached the schooner in five hours and other help was recalled.

The Stafford's lifeboat made two trips to take off Capt. Antonio Fernandes Matias, master of the fishing vessel, and his crew of 30. The captain, last to leave the schooner, set fire to his ship.

Ex-Adviser to Clay Warns Of Peril in a Split Germany

By The Associated Press

The advice that "we might as well dig in and prepare for the inevitable conflict" if a peace settlement splits Germany came yesterday from James K. Pollock, former adviser to Gen. Lucius D. Clay.

The dangerous split, he explain in an article for the Foreign Policy Association, could be in a Germany divided between a Soviet-dominated area and an area controlled by the Western powers.

Pollock became familiar with Germany as adviser on governmental affairs to General Clay, military governor of the American zone there. The Foreign Policy Association is a private research organization.

Peace or "Cold War"?

Pollock said that at the forthcoming Foreign Ministers' meeting in London, which will consider a German peace treaty, "the choice is quite clearly for peace or a continuation of the present 'cold war.'"

"It is entirely possible," he said, "to solve the German problem in such a way as to contribute to the progress of peaceful international life. But if there is continued drift, or if a division of Germany takes place, a disintegration of the present embryo peace will inevitably occur." He added:

"Either Germany should be reconstituted within boundaries and on an economic foundation which will support its teeming population on a reasonable standard of living, or it will be divided into a Soviet-dominated area and one controlled by the Western powers.

"If the latter alternative is followed, then we might as well dig in and prepare for the inevitable conflict."

Pollock is now professor of political science and chairman of the division of social sciences at the University of Michigan.

Must Come From Russia

In the same report, Edward S. Mason, chief economic adviser to Secretary of State Marshall at the Moscow Foreign Ministers' Conference last spring, declared that "the major concessions" for a unified German settlement will have to come from the Soviet government.

He added that "unless and until we can secure Soviet cooperation in a German settlement, our policy toward Germany will have to be shaped within the context of the current foreign aid program for western Europe."

Mason is now dean of the graduate school of public administration at Harvard.

British Red Sees U. S. Muzzling Its 'Imperialists'

Glasgow, Scotland, Nov. 9 (U.P.). United States democracy will eventually muzzle the "imperialist businessmen, fire-eating politicians and journalists" responsible for America's "clumsy and provocative foreign policy," Leftwing Laborite Kohni Zilliacus declared today.

In the meantime, Zilliacus told the Scottish USSR Society, "the temper of the American Congress and administration is so reactionary as to be hostile to everything for which the Labor government and the British workers stand."

The leftist member of Parliament leaves by air Friday for the United States to begin a lecture tour under the auspices of the United States-Soviet Friendship Society.

U. S.-Russian Discord Hardens Over Palestine's Partition

structions from Moscow or were ready to meet without them now. A spokesman for Soviet Delegate Semyon Tsarapkin said "we are ready to meet if we hear from the American delegation."

The Americans and Russians had between now and Tuesday morning to agree on a compromise. Otherwise, the full 57-nation Palestine committee, being called into continuous sessions beginning Tuesday, was destined to wrestle with two divergent proposals at the risk of even noncooperation from one or the other of the two great powers.

It would mean, in the opinion of most delegates, that the Assembly might fail to adopt a clear-cut plan for Palestine partition at this time—and perhaps never succeed. The voting already promises to be so close that lack of support by both the United States and Russia and their supporters would make it impossible for partition to get the necessary two-thirds majority in the Assembly.

American objections to the Canadian compromise proposal were said to revolve around its provision that the U. N. Security Council would maintain control of the proposed three-man U. N. commission to help partition Palestine. The Canadians adopted the American suggestion that Britain be called on to enforce partition, instead of requiring some U. N. force. Canada suggested, however, that Russia's proposal for putting the Security Council instead of the Assembly in over-all direction of the project was more logical.

Maniu Judge Revealed as Nazi Prison Chief Who in Year Rose to Equal Power Under Reds

(Mr. Franck, Bucharest correspondent, who was expelled last Wednesday from Romania, passed three and a half years in Romanian prisons, allegedly for services rendered to an Allied intelligence agency.

By Yves C. Franck

Paris, Nov. 9.—Just two weeks before the start of the trial of John Maniu, president of the National Peasant Party of Romania, a discreet announcement was published in Bucharest newspapers, recording the appointment of a new chief of the military tribunal of the Second Army Corps district.

He was Col. Alexandre Petrescu, doubtless a name little known outside of his own country.

But I had known the name before so I investigated and learned to my astonishment that the man who was to judge Maniu and his 18 codefendants was none other than the wartime director general of all prisons and concentration camps in Romania. I had seen him often.

Condemned Three Times

First about myself. I was arrested in February, 1941, for pro-Allied activities. After nine months of investigation and questioning by the German Gestapo and Romanian secret police, I was brought before the Bucharest military court. No tangible proof was brought against me and I had admitted nothing so I escaped with a sentence of eight years at hard labor.

It was snowing hard that November night when I was taken back to my cell. Other men were there whom I scarcely knew, but the fact that their feet were chained made it clear to me they had just been condemned to death.

There were three of them, a doctor, a chemist and an accountant, all accused of possessing explosives and of Communist activity.

Their judge had been Col. Alexandre Petrescu. He had condemned these heroes after a hearing that lasted a half hour. He had also condemned to death their wives, the only women executed so far as I know in Romania during the war.

In Charge of Prisoners

The next time I heard of Petrescu was when he condemned to death a Greek named Georges Sarandos, accused by the Gestapo of the murder of General Doehring on January 19, 1941.

Doehring was in command of all German transport in southeast Europe when the war against the Soviet Union was being prepared. His death enraged German and Romanian police. Sarando was picked up and questioned, without result. He was taken to Berlin for further questioning and treatment, then brought back to Bucharest for trial. A Colonel Vasilu was president of the fifth section of the military court at that time, but when he blocked Gestapo intervention in the proceedings, he was ordered to Constanza, and a few weeks later dropped from the army list. Colonel Petrescu succeeded him and condemned Sarandos to death.

Not long after, Petrescu was named director general of all prisons and concentration camps in Romania and all camps in areas of the Soviet Union occupied by the Romanian army. Soon after this appointment I saw him for the first time.

Brought Family

I was in prison at Vacaresti, having been transferred from the Jugoj Penitentiary in Transylvania. Innumerable rules, regulations and announcements preceded the inspection trip of the new director general. We were all terrorized. Iron discipline was imposed.

Surrounded by a staff of directors, assistant secretaries, inspectors and police, Petrescu arrived. We stood in the courtyard, then passed in review before the new director general. The fatherland was in danger, he told us. From then on every one had to work. We went to work—for the colonel and his family, we agreed. His wife was in charge of prison accounts. She is now chef decabinet, or office director of the Ministry of Interior in Bucharest. His son, in his fourth year at medicine, took charge of the prison hospital.

Things went from bad to worse. One day, however, there was an unexpected inspection. It was a disaster for Petrescu. He was expelled from his post. That was a few weeks before August 23, 1944, the day the coup d'etat put Antonescu in prison and Romania in the Allied camp.

At that time I was asked by the newspaper Universul of Bucharest to publish an account of my confinement. I wrote several articles, not sparing Colonel Petrescu, whose speedy arrest and judgment I demanded.

Ordered to Leave

One year later Petrescu was again in the president's chair of the political section of the Bucharest military tribunal. It was only then that the Romanion Communist Party, doubtless foreseeing the great trial which is being held today, was making use of men whose past records made certain of their reliability.

Three weeks ago the police came to my room in Bucharest and ordered me to leave the country within 48 hours. No explanation was offered and there was no reply to my inquiries.

It was, of course, impossible to leave Romania in 48 hours, for I needed visas or authorization from the Russians to cross the frontier. They arrived last Wednesday morning and I departed that afternoon.

After my arrival in France, I thought I should explain the background of the man who will pass judgment on Juliu Maniu.

Greeks Using Minefields in Guerilla War

Athens, Nov. 9 (AP).—Dispatches from Salonika said today six guerillas were wounded and captured when they "walked into a minefield" south of Lake Doiran on the Yugoslav border. It was the first mention of use of mines in the warfare in the north.

A report from Larisa said Greek army commandos had cleared the Communist-led guerillas from the eastern slopes of the mountains from Thessaly to Salonika. The commandos landed in a snowstorm at Platamon on the seacoast 30 miles northeast of Larisa, and freed 50 guerillas who had been forcibly recruited, the report added.

The commandos seized two large storehouses with weapons, food and clothing, and forced the surrender of 28 guerillas south of Platamon.

In Cheverly Mardi-Gras Show

A nine-act vaudeville show and a doll exhibit featuring 100 foreign dolls will highlight a "Mardi Gras" program to be held at the Cheverly-Tuxedo Elementary School, Cheverly, Md., at 7 p. m., Saturday.

The program, sponsored by the school's parent-teacher association, has been planned to raise funds for the purchase of additional equipment for the school, which was recently enlarged to include an auditorium and cafeteria as well as two additional classrooms. It will be the first function to be held in the school since completion of the remodeling.

The doll show and a handicraft exhibit by the Cheverly Tuxedo Boy Scout Troop will be held from 7 to 8 p. m., and will be reopened again during the intermission of the vaudeville show. Prior to the entertainment, the school building will be open to public inspection.

According to Ralph G. Tuttle, general chairman for the benefit, more than 50 persons will appear in the vaudeville show.

Assisting Tuttle on the general committee are Mrs. Mercedes Frazier, Mrs. Elsie Stickle and Mrs. Alice Tuttle. They will be assisted by Mrs. Blanche Franklin, in charge of "bake sale;" Mrs. Bond Tayman, doll show; Robert Truppner, Boy Scout exhibit; Jerry Larkin, intermission refreshments, and Roger Stewart, stage.

Coup Topples Siam Regime

palace, ministry of defense and ministry of interior. Hourly newscasts informed the public of the developments.

The ousted Premier, Nawasuwat, was under fire for the rising cost of living and allegations of inefficiency in his government. He was under pressure also for rice hoarding in Siam, one of the major rice-growing areas in southeast Asia.

The new leader said a military staff of 28 ranking officers were aiding him temporarily in taking charge of the kingdom, and that he planned to form a coalition government which was expected to include former Premier Luang Aphaiwongse and many old-time career officers.

Reported in Hiding

Nawasuwat was reported in hiding, along with former Premier Pridi Phanomyong and Police General Adul Detcheras. The last two were described as being opposed to the coup, and there was speculation they might be planning organized resistance.

Phanomyong was a leader of the Siamese underground which worked for the Allies during the war. He was Premier when young King Ananda Mahidol was killed by a gunshot wound inflicted under mysterious circumstances in the palace on June 9, 1946—an event which was followed by considerable unrest in the country. He resigned last August under charges of failure to solve the mystery of the King's death.

King Phumiphon Adulet, 19, succeeded Mahidol. (He is believed to be in Switzerland.)

Songgram met correspondents in his headquarters established in the ministry defense building.

He said he acted to save his country from ruin and was prepared to prove his good intentions to the world.

Armed Coup Crushed in Quito, Ecuador Reports

Quito, Ecuador, Nov. 9 (AP).—A military communique announced today that an attempted armed uprising in Quito had been crushed.

The communique said a group of unidentified armed persons had attacked the barracks of the Vencedores (victors) battalion in the center of Ecuador's capital last night. After several minutes of shooting, the announcement said, the attacking force fled.

Two soldiers were reported wounded.

Implicated as revolutionists were supporters of Col. Carlos Manchano, who seized the presidency in a coup last August 24, but was ousted by the army 10 days later, and Comdr. Antonio Alomia, defeated in last Sunday's mayoral election here.

Police Exonerated

The police and the community at large have reason to be grateful to the FBI and the civil rights section of the Department of Justice for the thorough investigation they have made into the death of John Forrest Bunch. Mr. Bunch's death from a fractured skull and two brain hemorrhages, after he had been found by the police in an intoxicated condition and had at first been refused admission to Gallinger Hospital, gave rise to numerous charges and suspicions. Because of other cases of police brutality it was not unnatural that the police should have been suspected of mistreating the man. When such suspicions arise, they can be disposed of only by a thorough investigation such as the Department of Justice has made in this case.

The investigation failed to turn up any credible evidence of mistreatment of Mr. Bunch by the police. No witness could be found who claimed to have seen the police beat or strike the victim. Two witnesses occupying cells adjacent to that in which Mr. Bunch was confined at No. 9 Precinct told conflicting stories of what they had heard. Neither could see into Mr. Bunch's cell. If the worst version of Frank Regan's statement is accepted, the police were negligent in attending to Mr. Bunch and getting him to Gallinger Hospital the second time. But that testimony conflicts in some details with Mr. Regan's own previous statements and with various known facts about the case. The investigators concluded that there is no evidence of any form of police brutality or of any effort on the part of the police to cover up the facts about the manner in which the case was handled. That should put an end to the charges to which the case has given rise.

There is still no proof as to how Mr. Bunch met the injuries that caused his death. But the evidence seems to us to point strongly to the conclusion that he fractured his skull in his fall to the sidewalk before his arrest, and that this fracture, which was not apparent on the surface even when he was admitted to Gallinger the second time, was not discovered because of his intoxication. What the case does illustrate in striking degree is the need for a clinic such as Major Barrett has suggested, to which intoxicated persons found on the streets could be taken. Until intoxication is recognized as a sickness rather than a crime, the danger that other persons suffering from serious injuries but found in an apparently intoxicated state will not have proper care will remain.

D. C. Plebiscite

Representative James C. Auchincloss has taken an enlightened view of the suggestions by various citizens for changes in the home-rule plan for the District that his subcommittee has proposed. The report outlining a new governmental plan for Washington was purposely designated a preliminary draft so that changes could readily be made it further discussion should indicate they are desirable. And Mr. Auchincloss gave the impression, when he participated in a radio forum on home rule last week, that he welcomes ideas for improvement of his plan from the citizens who, if Congress approves, will live under it.

This attitude is in line with our best tradition of progressive lawmaking. A constructive plan has been laid before the public for general discussion. Comment and debate can thus be focused upon specific problems and issues, probably with the effect of strengthening the plan and solidifying public opinion behind it. In our opinion, this is of no little significance, for, promising and comprehensive as the Auchincloss plan is, we think some detailed modifications are desirable.

There is, for example, the very unequal representation which the plan would give to different parts of the city in the selection of members of the proposed District council. The Northwest and Southwest, as well as the Northeast and Southeast, would be permitted to nominate two residents each to serve on the council. The Northwest, however, has nearly 14 times as many inhabitants as the Southwest. The resulting inequality would be minimized in some measure by having the candidates nominated in the four different sections elected by vote of the entire District. Still they would doubtless consider themselves representatives of the sections in which they had been nominated. If the general outline of this plan is to be retained, the least that can be done is to reduce the sectional nominations to one for each area, leaving eight councilmen to be elected at large. We should like to see this aspect of the problem thoroughly explored with the aim of making the council as representative as possible.

One other modification in the plan seems to us important. At present it calls for no plebiscite. A vote of the people at present, before the plan has taken definite shape, as some have suggested, would doubtless mean little. But when Congress has enacted a new home-rule charter for the District, the people certainly ought to be permitted to accept or reject it. We have no doubt as to what the outcome of such a referendum would be; but aside from clearing the atmosphere, it would give the people a valuable sense of participation in the creation of a new government which they would thereafter have to operate.

Cost Of Aid To Europe

Before undertaking to estimate the over-all dollar cost of European aid the Harriman Committee analyzed exhaustively the material requirements of the countries participating in the Paris conference on the Marshall Plan. Revisions of the Paris schedules took the form in some cases of changes in estimates of the amount of goods needed or the amounts that the recipient countries might reasonably be expected to utilize to good advantage. Other revisions were made because of the inability of the United States to supply various key commodities in the amounts desired.

The real cost of our contributions to European recovery depends, as the Harriman report states, upon the amount of goods and services supplied by this country; it "does not depend upon the size of entries in books of account." The over-all cost of the program in dollars is, therefore, a very inadequate measure of real cost, since it fails to reflect the impact on the domestic economy of transferring to other countries specific goods and services. It is also defective because of the rapid deterioration in the purchasing power of the dollar.

Notwithstanding the limitations of the dollar approach to consideration of the European-aid program, that program has to be implemented by means of dollars, most of which will have to be obtained through congressional appropriations. For that reason, summarized statements of the Harriman Committee findings feature estimates of the cost of the program to the Treasury in dollars for the first year and for the whole four-year period. The former estimate is placed at 5.75 billion dollars; the latter ranges from 12 billion dollars to 17 billion. The four-year estimate is conceded to be subject to a wide margin of error because of various unpredictable factors and is offered merely to afford the public some idea of the financial burdens entailed by acceptance of the program.

The committee assumes that costs will be determined from year to year and that appropriations will be made annually. Hence, interest is centered on the one-year estimate of 5.75 billion dollars—the amount that would have to be appropriated to launch the program in 1948. Deducting the three quarters of a billion dollars of unexpended appropriations for European aid, the amount of new appropriations required would total five billion dollars. These Treasury outlays do not represent the total dollar cost of first-year aid but it is believed that the additional funds needed to the amount of a billion or a billion and a quarter dollars could be supplied by the International Bank and other sources.

The direct impact of the program on the Federal budget is, however, measured not by total costs but by the sums appropriated for aid. The question that will confront Congress, therefore, if the President's program embodies the recommendations of the Harriman Committee, is whether to provide an additional five billion dollars for the first year of the relief program and, if so, whether to finance such outlays from budgetary surpluses or by borrowing. The latter question brings squarely to the fore the issue of tax reduction.

Without provisions for appropriations under the Marshall Plan the President estimated last August that the budget surplus would amount to 4.7 billion dollars for the current fiscal year. If the five billion dollars of new Marshall Plan appropriations were voted and half that sum expended in the first half of 1948, a substantial surplus would still remain. But if Congress were to accept the Marshall Plan and also put through a four billion dollar tax reduction bill, effective January 1, the surplus might reach the disappearing point by next June. In short, there is grave danger that a return to deficit financing would be necessary if tax reductions on the contemplated scale were to be approved coincident with acceptance of the Marshall Plan. As an alternative, Congress might, of course, reduce appropriations for European relief below the amounts considered necessary to make the program effective. In the one case, the forces of inflation, now rampant, would be augmented by new injections of purchasing power. In the latter event, we should be wasting our money and defeating our purpose by giving too little aid.

The Harriman Committee is well aware of the inflationary threat to our economy stemming from the foreign-aid program. For, as it explains, the purchase of scarce goods for export leaves more money in the hands of the public and at the same time reduces the amount of goods available for purchase. That makes it all the more imperative to avoid the further inflationary increases in bank credits that would result from financing the European aid program by means of loans. "The conclusion from this is," the committee states, "that the cost to the Government of foreign aid must be met out of taxes, not by borrowing. Further, in view of the present inflationary tendencies, it is of great importance that the budget should show better than a balance, and there should be a surplus left over to retire debt." If Messrs. Knutson, Taft and their like-minded colleagues would heed this advice and postpone plans for tax reduction at the next regular session, the most serious threat to the Marshall program would be eliminated.

Canada Next

Our neighbor to the North will, according to rumor, soon join the countries that have been compelled to restrict imports from the United States because of a shortage of American dollars and gold. Canada's plight is not caused by inability to produce exportable goods in quantities sufficient to pay for essential imports. Her dollar exchange crisis is due rather to Great Britain's inability to convert into dollars the sterling balances that are owing to Canada.

In former years Canada was able to finance an excess of imports from the United States from the proceeds of wheat, meat, etc., sold to Great Britain. In other words, the Canadians built up sterling balances by selling more to the British than they bought from them, exchanging these balances for United States dollars in free exchange markets and using those dollars to cover trade deficits with us. Canada now has to finance her adverse trade balance with the United States by parting with her gold and dollar reserves, because the system of multilateral trade on which she formerly relied has been wrecked by war.

Canada's unfavorable merchandise balance with us has, moreover, been growing rapidly during the past year. For example, during the first half of 1946 Canada's import surplus from trade with the United States amounted to approximately 196 million dollars; for the first half of 1947 it totaled 535 million dollars—an annual rate in excess of a billion dollars. Figures for the three months ended September 30 show an adverse merchandise balance close to 237 million dollars—that is, an annual rate in excess of 947 million dollars. As a result of the great outflow of American goods into Canada in excess of Canadian shipments to us, gold and United States dollar reserves acquired by Canada during the war as a result of heavy purchasing by the United States are rapidly being exhausted.

It is reported that the Canadian Finance Minister has hinted broadly that the time is close at hand when emergency measures will have to be taken. Official devaluation of the Canadian dollar is one possibility. Such action would tend to stimulate exports and check import buying. However, the more efficacious and more likely means of arresting the drain on dwindling supplies of American dollars and gold would be imposition of severe restrictions on imports of our products. The size of the trade deficit is, however, too great to be bridged by import restrictions. Or, rather, the restrictions would have to be intolerably onerous in order to enable Canada to balance her trade accounts with us. The effects of such drastic restrictions would be severely felt both in Canada and in this country. Consequently, it seems more than probable that Canada will be forced to seek dollars either by floating a loan in this country or by asking for United States Government aid in the form of a loan.

It is, indeed, a topsy-turvy world when an economically strong, prosperous people, amply able to pay their way, are compelled by the bankruptcy of their chief debtor, Great Britain, to turn for relief to emergency measures customarily regarded as the last resort of economically feeble and dependent countries.

Matchmaking

Those who feel that society may have lost something when matchmaking mothers were driven underground by derision will take an I-told-you-so comfort in advice recently given the United Parents Association by Dr. Leslie E. Luehrs, psychiatrist for the Community Service Society of New York. In an address on marriage and family living, he said parents have gone too far in trying to keep out of their children's lives in matters of romance, and should help them to select the right mates. One of the causes of the high divorce rate, he pointed out, is the fact that so many young people marry without knowing what they want. While he did not indorse the choice of mates by dictation of "heavy" parents, he felt that parents should work with their children in getting them to understand what kind of mates they need and want.

Of course some parents, notably ambitious mothers, zealously help their children to marry as advantageously as possible. But chiefly this consists in building the "right" social and economic associations from infancy, in keeping them in the right crowds, and in promoting their material welfare. On the other hand, the possessive parent, usually the mother, who wants to hold on to her children, or more frequently child, has become a present day problem. She is the stage and fiction successor to the matchmaking mother whom Jane Austen made immortal in Mrs. Bennett of Pride and Prejudice. The change from large families to small ones chiefly occasioned this. When parents no longer had to worry about the support of so many children, especially daughters, their matchmaking zeal declined. Also as women began to earn their own livings, husband catching was not so essential. But in this change many young people lost the active aid of parents in helping them attain the normal satisfactions of marriage. Needed today are more Mrs. Bennetts at heart with better heads.

Magill Tax Report

Matthew Woll's disagreement with the majority of the Magill Tax Committee illustrates the conflict that exists over the weight which should be given to such factors as ability to pay, ability to produce and incentives to produce in formulating tax policies. Ever since the Federal income tax was introduced, emphasis has been given to the ability to pay. More recently attention has been directed to the importance of not stifling the incentives to produce. Reports from England of coal miners' refusal to work Saturdays because taxes cut their pay for that day in half afford a striking example of the adverse effect of high taxes on incentives.

The longer-term influence of present income-tax schedules on the ability to produce is a subject which has not received the attention it deserves. If the income received by an individual approximates the value of his services to society as a whole, it is apparent that sharply graduated income-tax rates tend to remove from the national economy the services of those most valuable to it. For just as the coal miner avoids working extra days because the tax schedule gives him only half pay, so persons of special ability to produce are discouraged from using their ability to the full advantage of society when their compensation is cut by taxes to one quarter or less of the established rate of reward.

Similarly the national economy suffers when heavy taxes discourage the full use of capital. The antiquated industrial equipment which has been such an important element in England's plight is due in part at least to the failure over past decades to encourage new investments in industry by allowance of adequate returns on capital and adequate charges for depreciation and obsolescence in the tax program.

When income is considered from the point of view of the benefits accruing to society from the production which created that income, be it the activities of coal miners or executives, the ability to produce and the incentives for production take on increased importance. A reasonable regard to all three factors—ability to pay, ability to produce and incentives to produce—is essential to wise taxation and sound national economy.

Prejudging The Issue

Reflections upon the fairmindedness of delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations and their willingness to judge impartially upon facts to be presented are not likely to win votes for the would-be delegate from one of the area groups whose seating was delayed as the result of a challenge at the meeting on November 1.

Washington's more than 60 citizens' associations are composed of people from all walks of life who have at heart the best interests of the city in which they and their children reside. Having no vote for local or national governing officials, they nevertheless endeavor to express their views on needed improvements in every field of civic activity, on conditions under which they must live. That they have been successful is attested to by the weight which their recommendations carry with the Commissioners and Congress.

It has never been deemed un-American to bar or suspend from membership in any group one whose other activities and affiliations would put him at cross purposes with the size of the group, or who through these activities is likely to bring discredit upon the group. His desire for membership could stem only from a wish to be detrimental, not from any common interests with other members.

In this case the would-be delegate has assumed in advance that she will be refused a seat and has already proclaimed that she will "fight" the federation. Where there may have been little prejudice, she is creating it—perhaps so that she will be barred and can then complain of violation of her "rights."

If she is not accepted it will, no doubt, be less because of her political affiliations than because of antagonism and lack of faith in the federation's members that she has shown.

Police-State Methods

For Bert Andrews' November 2 story on the State Department employe discharged for "security" reasons, your paper and the Mr. Andrews concerned deserve the highest commendation. It was a blood-curdling revelation of how, Mr. Truman and his strictures on the police state notwithstanding, the police state is already with us.

It was all the more shocking to read, in the same issue, but on the first page of the amusements section, the following statement by your writer, Mr. Bob Considine:

"And two of our courts—New York and Illinois—recently have gone to considerable pains to point out that Americans who falsely accuse left-wingers of being Communists are guilty of libel if the accused successfully hides his CP card or is a Communist who operates without one."

In other words, the accusation does it. When a man proves he's no Communist, he proves only that he's been successful at concealing the fact that he is one. The more convincing the proof, the more successful the concealment. Any proof he may bring forward to show that he really is no Communist proves only his skill at concealing his Communist activities.

Is that really what the courts said?

"Confusion Of Rights"

Your editorial of November 1, on Professor Warne and the intimation that Federal employes are not entitled to the protection of the first amendment presented a refreshing innovation in the field of constitutional law. However, the same editorial expressed concern with procedures involved in the loyalty program. In light of such concern, the following new development may be of interest:

The standard form 57, application for Federal employment, is being revised to include the following questions:

1. "Are you now or have you ever been a member of the Communist Party, U. S. A.?"

2. "Are you now or have you ever been a member of any Communist organization?"

3. "Are you now or have you ever been a member of any Fascist organization?"

As recent hearings of House Un-American Committee and, further back, those of its predecessor the Dies Committee, indicated, the definitions of a "Communist" or "Fascist" organization are anything but clearcut. However, Executive Order 9835 prescribes a definitive standard for refusal of or removal from employment. That standard is membership in or association with organizations designated by the Attorney General as totalitarian, Fascist, Communist, or subversive. The same executive order requires the Attorney General to furnish a list of such organizations to the loyalty board of the Civil Service Commission. Common sense dictates that the board make public such a list.

The present vague wording of the questions makes it virtually impossible for the honest and conscientious applicant or employe to answer them in good faith. For example, if an applicant answers "no" to the questions and an organization to which he previously belonged is subsequently designated by the Attorney General as Fascist, the applicant may be charged with perjury and is subject to fine and imprisonment for falsification of his application.

Steel Statistics

Your paper on October 12 carried a column by Stewart Alsop entitled "Steelman Answer United States Economists." That statement contains some very loose and probably libelous language attributed to Mr. Voorhees and associates of the United States Steel Corp. in their effort to criticize and answer the statistical study of steel production and unemployment which I requested Mr. Louis H. Bean, a Government economist, to prepare for me. Mr. Bean's analysis appeared to me to be so straightforward in its factual presentation and far-reaching in its conclusions that I had it printed in the Congressional Record and welcomed its presentation before the Senate Subcommittee on Steel, of which I am a member.

The over-all record of steel production in relation to different levels of employment has not, as far as I know, heretofore been presented to the public in such a direct and illuminating manner. I know that many Senators and Congressmen, as well as persons in the steel industry, as a result of studying Mr. Bean's charts, now have a clearer picture in their minds of the record of steel production in good years and in bad, and of the level of steel production that we would normally need today and in the near future if that production conformed to the trend of production in previous prosperity years.

In view of this I find it incomprehensible as well as reprehensible that Mr. Voorhees and his associates criticize Mr. Bean's charts on the ground that they "are demonstrably phony, based on a logarithmic trick which would horrify any competent statistician." As a matter of fact, the conclusions that Mr. Bean points to in his analysis are not based on the record of production shown in the logarithmic chart, but rather on another arithmetic chart appearing in the study in which the record of production is related to the variations in unemployment. Furthermore, there is nothing tricky in the logarithmic chart which is used to present the longtime record of steel production from 1900 to date and which is standard procedure for any competent statistician.

I find that even before Mr. Bean submitted the statement for my information and use, he submitted a copy of his charts to Irving S. Olds, chairman of the board of directors, U. S. Steel Corp., with his letter of April 8. As far as I know, Mr. Bean has not yet received any acknowledgment of his April 8 request for criticism of his material. Yet, largely as a result of this study and the publicity our investigation has given to the Nation's needs for more steel, I am gratified to observe a new attitude on the part of the steel producers. Now they are seeking to point out their awareness of a need for more steel capacity. Will they take the next step dictated by such facts as Mr. Bean has disclosed and build the capacity required by a dynamic Nation bent on using its manpower and resources to the fullest?

The Sense Of Song

SELECTED POEMS OF SIDNEY LANIER; With a Preface by Stark Young. (Scribner, $2.50.)

This edition, which is of a size to fit comfortably into an overcoat pocket, contains about 60 pieces culled from The Complete Poems of Sidney Lanier, edited by the poet's widow and published a few years after his death. Mr. Stark Young, who has made the selections with an admirable discretion, introduces them with an observation about the volatility of poetical fashions. It would be hard indeed to discover any poet important enough to be noticed in the anthologies or literary histories whose verse is more contrary to the prevalent temper than Lanier's. If Lanier's poems are still being read and recited, as some of them, like the Song of the Chattahoochee, the Marches of Glynn, Corn, or the Ballad of Trees and the Master, certainly are, it is for sentimental or other reasons having very little to do with currently held notions about the content and techniques of poetry. Lanier, both through his verse and his published theories of versification, had a very large influence on many poets of his own generation, notably his friend and former companion-in-arms, Father John Banister Tabb, but I doubt that his work is seriously studied by any young poet today or even that it would get more sympathetic attention from a contemporary editor than the poetry of, say, Mr. T. S. Eliot or of Mr. W. H. Auden would have received from the late Richard Watson Gilder.

Obviously, then, Sidney Lanier was not one of those majestic spirits who transcend poetic fashions and are thus, "not for an age but for all time," although this is a point on which it is well to recall the slight esteem in which both Chaucer and Shakespeare were held by the Augustan age and for that matter Lanier's own contempt for the poetry of Pope. It is plain, however, that Lanier was never content with the role of minor poet, that he believed in his genius and strove for greatness. "I know," he wrote, "that I am in soul, and shall be in life and utterance, a great poet." What we have to decide, then, is whether his admirers were right in supposing that he was robbed of a place among the immortals by illness, poverty and an untimely death. Mr. Young, although an excellent critic, does not attempt to answer the question here; he is content to remind us of the beauty of the poet's character, and the tragic nobility of his life, and to observe that, "the more we know of him the better we can judge his achievement and even greater promise." This is perhaps true in a moral sense, but I have never been persuaded that it is a sound esthetic principle. We should, it seems to me, be capable of estimating the quality of poetry quite apart from the private character of the poet. We know nothing about the character of the author of, say, the Chanson de Roland, but we know that it is, in its way, a wonderful poem. We know nothing about the character of Homer, and precious little about the character of Chaucer or Shakespeare. The hymns of the Rev. Charles Wesley and of Father Faber are enough to remind us that it is possible for a good man to be a bad poet and what we know about Francois Villon or Lord Byron encourages us to suspect that the reverse may also be true. Perhaps the one generalization about poetry and character we can safely make is that it is hardly possible for a dull and insensitive man to be much of a poet, and certainly Lanier was neither dull nor insensitive.

For the rest we can only ask ourselves what we look for in poetry and how far the poet has provided it. It is now that we begin to get some inkling of why poetic fashions change. What is most characteristic of these poems is precisely what is least characteristic of contemporary poetry, that is, a deliberate and sometimes painful striving after melodic effect. Conversely, we find in Lanier's poetry an almost complete absence of the qualities for which the best poets of our time strive most earnestly, namely, visual imagery and symbolic suggestion. Here we seem to find a natural corollary of Lanier's rather narrow theories of prosody. He was an extraordinarily gifted musician, and it was his belief, set forth in The Science of English Verse, that music and poetry are merely different species of the genus sound, and that both are governed by a single set of rules. Thus the metrical foot is merely the musical bar and there is a similar correspondence between poetical and musical phrases; vowels should be so arranged as to produce vibrations of the vocal chords equivalent to tone colors, or timbre. Thus the only function of the eye in the reading of poetry is to stimulate the ear to an inaudible reconstruction of the sound patterns. Lanier justified his doctrine historically by finding the origin of poetic rhythm in the dance, and mathematically by an appeal to the laws of physics.

This curious synthesis of art and science explains why the very qualities which, according to Asger Hamerick, director of the Peabody Orchestra in Baltimore in which Lanier was for several years first flautist, are the qualities which one seeks vainly in Lanier's poetry, that is, "intuition and spontaneity." These, alas, are qualities for whose lack no craftsmanship can compensate. Lanier's poetic gift, then, was wholly aural; his thought was, for a poet's, curiously abstract. Thus, with all his confidence and zeal, he could never achieve that harmony of sound, image and idea which is present in all great lyric poetry. And I think we must conclude that in his case a brilliant musician was sacrificed to an indifferent rhapsodist.

Germany Under Ground

IT IS necessary to begin by realizing that the Germans have already gone underground. I cannot speak about the Russian and the French zones. But in the British and the American zones the gap is rapidly widening between the official appearance and the German reality. The allied military authorities continue to reign but more and more in the interior life of Germany they do not govern.

Nor can it be said, I think, that as our authority recedes, it is being exercised by the Germans we are sponsoring. It is so probable as to be almost certain that these German officials are, as under any military occupation by a foreign conqueror, either unrepresentative men whose positions depend entirely upon our support, or they are men who feel that as patriotic Germans they must appease the conquerors in order to deceive them. In individual cases it is very hard to know which is which. But that things are not what they seem is, in my view, the first thing to understand about Germany.

FOR EXAMPLE. In March of this year the British made a study of how during a period of 12 weeks food rationing worked in 20 large towns of the German state of North Rhine-Westphalia. This is the Ruhr region. They used the device of sampling, much as in the Gallup and Roper polls. During these 12 weeks the British occupying authorities had delivered to the local German officials enough food to meet the official ration of 1550 calories for each holder of a ration card. The investigators made a check to find out how much of the food which the British had provided actually reached the German consumer through legal channels, that is to say on their ration cards. They found that on the average for all 20 towns the actual ration legally received was much lower than the official ration: it fell as low as 740 calories and rose as high as 1170 calories.

Thus much of the food, which the British had imported or had collected from German farmers, disappeared after the German officials got hold of it and before it was distributed to the consumers. It went, of course, into the black market which is the principal market in our two zones. There the Germans who had money, or rather cigarettes, liquor, and tangible goods, supplemented their official rations—nobody has the least idea by how much—at the expense of the Germans who were too poor and too helpless to take care of themselves. We must remember in this connection that though the population of our zones has increased considerably, the new population consists largely of women, children, and old people. There is a shortage of men between the ages of 20 and 60, and these men are the ones who operate and exploit the black market at the expense of the weaker members of the German community.

THERE IS every reason to think that this disparity between the official and the actual state of affairs is prevalent throughout the whole economic, political, and cultural life of Germany today. It is certain that in our zone, for example, the collection of food from the farms is at least as unsuccessful as the official distribution of food in the 20 large towns of the Ruhr. I think we must also suspect the official figures of German production, including coal. From neutral sources long intimately connected with German coal production, I have had an estimate which puts as high as 20 per cent the hiding of Ruhr coal and its diversion into the black market. Anyone who remembers the history of the French occupation of the Ruhr after the First World War will not find this estimate incredible—especially when he realizes how deeply the Germans were corrupted in the long years of Hitler, and how well they were schooled in the fine art of appeasing and deceiving the authorities for their own personal survival and profit.

There is also, and it would be surprising if there were not, what we may call a political black market in Germany. I am not talking about secret conspiracies which the British and American intelligence services may or may not be able to detect. I am talking about the recognized public life of Germany. That German officials and politicians live in an underground world as well as in the apparent world of their official duties and statements is, to put it mildly, strongly indicated.

PERHAPS the best objective evidence on this point is the black market itself. For the black market—German style—is not due simply and wholly to the difficulties of making a bad system of rationing and price control work in a country where people are hungry, the currency worthless, the people demoralized, and deception of the alien occupying authorities a patriotic privilege, even a patriotic duty. The study of the Ruhr towns shows that the German officials to whom the British delivered the food must themselves have connived at and participated in the diversion of so much of it to the black market.

If that is what happens with food, which is the main preoccupation of the Allied and the German authorities, it is a reasonable assumption that the disparity between the official and the actual is even greater elsewhere. Recently in one town the resistance of the German workers to the dismantling of a torpedo plant was traced to the mayor and the chief of police—both of them ostensibly selected carefully by the occupying authorities. As for the majors or colonels detailed to "control" factories and mines, it would be extraordinarily innocent to believe that the German managers provide as much information as they provide enterainment and liquor.

BUE EVEN more important in the long run—because it bears directly on what Senator Vandenberg and Mr. Byrnes are saying about separate peace with western Germany—is the political attitude of the German party leaders. I did not see Dr. Kurt Schumacher, the chairman of the Social Democratic Party and the leading candidate for Prime Minister of the new western German state we hear so much about. He was in the United States on a visit which was facilitated by the State Department—a visit which seems to have inspired him, according to Mr. Delbert Clark of the New York Times, to reverse everything he has been saying about German unity and to become the advocate of a partitioned Germany. But though I missed seeing Dr. Schumacher, I saw several of his more important colleagues both in politics and in the trade unions. And I have no hesitation in saying that if Dr. Schumacher is now for a separate western German state and a separate peace, he has either decided that a bird in the hand—which is to be Premier under Allied occupation—is worth two in the bush, or he is taking us for a ride.

For if there is anything that is certain in this world, it is that no German politician, who hopes to have a following among the broad masses will ever, or can ever, accept the partition of Germany. Not merely the economic unification of the four zones, which we have been seeking, but the restoration of the political unity of the Reich and the restoration of its territorial boundaries is, as it inevitably must be, the aim of all German national parties. On this point there is no discernible difference of view from the Communist left to the extreme right. The only genuine exceptions are those few in Bavaria and the Rhineland who are the heirs of an old separatist tradition. That is why the most effective theme of German Communist propaganda is "German unity," with the reminder that only by a deal with the Russians can the unity of Germany, as Germans mean it, be restored.

FOR THAT reason among others I hope we shall not make the mistake of setting up a German government in the British-American zones and of making a separate peace with it, and of giving it sovereignty. I am not talking about merging the zones for military government and of giving the Germans a greater degree of responsibility. I am talking of a separate peace with a western German state, which so many in London and in Washington propose if no agreement is reached at the next meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers.

For the result of that can only be that the western German state will then have to negotiate that treaty of peace with eastern Germany, with Russia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Austria and Yugoslavia which we find ourselves unable to negotiate. If, as Senator Vandenberg suggests, the Council of Foreign Ministers is adjourned sine die after a deadlock at the November meeting, this will mean that the places now occupied by Mr. Marshall and Mr. Bevin will be taken by Dr. Schumacher, or Herr Jakob Kaiser of the Christian Democrats, or whoever it is who becomes the chief of the western German state. The negotiations between the western Germans and the eastern Germans and with the Soviet orbit may at first be secret. But that there will be negotiation is unavoidable.

THE GERMANS of the western state must negotiate for political reasons. Consider, for example, the mere name of our proposed German state. Is it to be called "Germany" or is it to be called "Western Germany?" Any name we give it will be a standing reminder and invitation to come to terms with the east. Consider also Berlin, and whether having broken off negotiations with Russia and made a separate peace, we evacuate Berlin or stay there. If we evacuate it, we shall have surrendered to Russia the ace of trumps—namely the power to restore to Germany its ruined but none the less historic capital. And if we try to stay, what will we be staying in Berlin for, since quadripartite military government no longer exists even in theory?

The western Germans must also negotiate for economic reasons since so much of German trade flows to the East. We shall even have to advise them to negotiate. For the Marshall Plan is not, as so many suppose, a plan for making western Europe and western Germany self-supporting after a rupture with the East. Contrary to what appears to be the popular impression in this country, the plan cannot succeed, and western Europe must therefore be subsidized indefinitely, unless trade between eastern and western Europe is restored by 1951 to very near the prewar normal.

THEREFORE, I contend that whatever else we do or cannot do at the next meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers, the one thing we should not do is to make a final break followed by a separate peace. The present stalemate, bad and expensive as it is, could not be so bad and so expensive as that.

For though we are losing control of the internal life of Germany, we do at least still control the external relations of western Germany. Russia, the eastern countries, and eastern Germany must still deal with us in settling the international status of Germany. But if we make a separate peace with western Germany, we shall lose sight of and control over the settlement of the German question. The negotiation will disappear underground, and neither the Germans nor the Russians will need to consider our views or our interests.

IT WILL then be the Russians who can reunite Germany up to the Oder-Neisse line. It will be the Russians who could restore the prewar frontiers of Germany. We, on the other hand, will have been committed to paying the deficit of western Germany. If we pay it, the Germans will have nothing more to gain from us. For everything they want the most they will then have to go to the Russians.

And if we withhold the subsidy because we do not like the arrangements they are making with Russia and with the eastern countries, we shall become for the Germans the power which enforces the partition of the fatherland by using the weapon of starvation.

Therefore, I contend that we must not jump out of the frying pan into the fire. If we cannot reach an agreement with the Russians at the London Conference, we should not break off the negotiations but should prepare a formula designed to resume negotiation in the spring. Then presumably the Marshall Plan will have been adopted, its advantages, inducements, and promises will have begun to demonstrate themselves, and we shall be identified not with the division of Europe and the partition of Germany but with the unity of Europe and its recovery from the war.

Small Business Asks Truman For Free Enterprise Views

By The Associated Press

President Truman was asked yesterday for an immediate, positive statement of the actual, official administration position on the free, competitive enterprise system."

The request came from the National Federation of Small Business which made public a message to the President.

The federation expressed concern because of remarks it ascribed to Undersecretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman. It interpreted these to mean that Chapman does not believe in free, competitive enterprise. But Chapman told a reporter that "I think if you read my whole speech you will not get that interpretation at all."

The federation statement said Chapman stated on October 4: "In these days of world-wide change and adjustment, the Republicans still resort to free enterprise panaceas and other old-time remedies, which didn't work even when new." The federation told the President that it "is concerned deeply lest Mr. Chapman's political and economic views may characterize the real, underlying philosophy of the Administration."

Chapman observed the federation had "misinterpreted something taken out of the text."

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Struggle Ahead

PRAGUE, NOV. 9.—If the growing Communist terror succeeds in reducing this country to the state of any other Soviet satellite, what will be the lot of the Czechs? The most important factor bearing on this vital question is neither ethical nor moral, but sternly practical. Even before attaining absolute mastery, the Soviets have already given proof that in their hands the highly developed and specialized Czechoslovak industrial economy will be like an expensive and delicate watch in the hands of an energetic child.

This is crucial. The Soviet organization of eastern and central Europe cannot be maintained forever by force alone. In this area, more advanced than the Soviet Union, populated by men and women with memories of better times, it will not always be enough for the machine to be merely strong; it must also be productive, and Czechoslovakia, as the most progressive of all the nations within the Soviet sphere is likely to become the first test case.

FIRST OF ALL, it must be noted that the present appearance of Czech prosperity is partly delusive. This country was enriched as well as looted by the Nazis, much new industrial plant was built here during the war years, and the Nazis actually increased Czech industrial output by more than 20 per cent. Old and new industrial plant survived the conflict with relatively little damage, and large stocks of industrial raw materials were also left behind by the defeated Germans.

These advantages, plus huge UNRRA aid, plus the industry and ingenuity of the people, account for the wonderfully rapid postwar revival here. Now, however, the wartime stocks of raw materials are exhausted. The national industrial plant is beginning to suffer severely from being operated full blast for two years with no repair or replacement. And a severe dollar shortage is restricting imports of vital raw materials. These causes, combined with the sudden search for hard currency by Czechs preparing to flee the country, have already produced an ominous result. Since the Marshall Plan crisis, the Czech crown has almost halved in value on the Prague black market. Crowns can now be bought at the rate of more than 200 to the dollar.

The Czech Communists promise that trade with the East will extricate the country from its difficulties, but the most important Czech raw materials come from the west. The greatest efforts have not increased Czech trade with the Soviet sphere beyond 25 per cent of the total. And what makes the outlook all the more grim is the experience the Czechs have already had with the Soviets as raiders.

AT THIS MOMENT, Czechoslovakia's favorite dumpling diet is acutely threatened by a bad harvest. As a reward for nonparticipation in the Marshall Plan, the Kremlin has promised to cover the deficit with 200,000 tons of grain. A little more than 12,000 tons of grain have been delivered, and shipments have ceased. The Soviets want to be paid, and paid well, for their kindness. Furthermore, they do not want the highly finished products in which Czech industry has always specialized. Their main demand is for 200,000 tons of crude cast-iron pipe. To meet the demand, the Czechs would virtually have to dismantle their iron and steel industry.

Nor is this fundamental unfitness of Czech specialized industry to meet crude Soviet requirements the only difficulty. Czech blast furnaces are built to consume high quality ore. The Soviets for a long time persistently offered their own iron ore, high in sulphur content. Finally, after the most desperate pleas, the Czechs received a Soviet promise of 100 cars of Swedish ore. On arrival, the shipment was subjected to spot check, passed as meeting specifications, and sent to the blast furnaces. The furnaces were instantly ruined. From ignorance or fraud, the Soviet bureaucrats had included 8 tons of low-quality, high-sulphur-content ore, which the spot check had not disclosed.

Again, Soviet cotton was promised—a certain number of thousands of bales of four different grades, suited to the Czech textile factories. But all bales were found to be of the same grade on delivery, or, again, the Czechs hoped to sell the Soviets plain gray goods, to meet the need for textiles of the Soviet people, and to reserve their high-quality output to get dollars from the west. But the Soviets insisted on getting the high-quality product, in order to sell it themselves for hard currency which they also need.

For these reasons, suppliant delegations of Czech officials are constantly on the road to Moscow, where they find that Soviet Trade Commissar Mikoyan is even less interested in broad national foreign policy than our own curious Secretary of Agriculture.

For these reasons also, the future is fairly predictable. If the growing Communist terror is successful, Czechoslovakia's western level of life is doomed.

ALL THE COMBINED difficulties and pressures will bring the Czech people, now the most fortunate in Europe, near to the dreadful state of the masses in most areas of Soviet rule. For us, this has a powerful meaning. For the present, the United States should make some gesture—some indication of sympathy and interest—to prove that Czechoslovakia has not been utterly abandoned by the west. This will help the non-Communist Czech leaders. Even so, however, their struggle against the Communists will be unequal. As indicated above, they may well be defeated. In that event, a new phase will be entered and if, in this new phase, Czechoslovakia experiences increasing hardship, while the efforts of the United States provide greater and greater well-being for the neighbor nations of western Europe, the comparison will ultimately produce another and quite different sort of cataclysm. This is the great risk the Soviets have run in their European imperialism. It remains for us to take advantage of it.

American Aid Abroad

By Mark Sullivan

Report Of The President's Committee

BOTH AS TO FACTS and conclusions, the report of President Truman's Committee on Foreign Aid is the complete and final word. No more is needed by the people seeking light and guidance on an immense and complex problem. And the report contains everything that is needed by Congress as it moves toward judgment about methods, which is the only important field that remains open.

This report answers the questions that our people have been asking about all aspects of our aid to Europe, ever since Secretary Marshall laid the situation before us in his speech at Harvard University last June. As an approach to answering the questions, the committee itself begins by asking them. It does this in a summary the clarity and simplicity of which is one of the teeming evidences of the committee's quality:

"1. Why should the United States furnish aid? 2. Why do the European nations need help? 3. How much money and what kind of goods can we safely and wisely furnish? 4. How can such a program be financed and administered? 5. What will be the impact of such a program on our economy?"

THE COMMITTEE'S answers are complete and detailed and, this quality calls for emphasis, candid. The candor is illustrated by the manner in which the committee states that one of our reasons for aid to Europe lies in the threat of Russia to us. This threat is stated in words that are plain but without deliberate provocativeness; provocativeness is there, but it lies in the facts, it is not evoked by this committee's words:

"Open ideological war has been declared already . . . it has been called a cold war . . . it is cold only in the sense that guns are not smoking and bombs . . . not exploding. In every other respect the ideological war of the Communists is as ruthless and as determined a drive to achieve world domination as a hot war."

To single out this quotation, from a report that is a hundred thousand words long, may be distortion. The committee itself does not emphasize it. The committee is stating the several reasons we should give aid to Europe, and one of these is to make those countries economically self-supporting, to the end that they be able to resist susceptibility to communism and threat of Russian domination. To those countries, aid from us is a means to preserve economic strength and political independence. To us, likewise, it is a means to achieve, in the committee's words, "the survival of the American system of free enterprise." It is a means also to preserve our political independence, for a Europe submerged by communism and under Russian domination would be a direct threat to us.

In addition to what may be called, if we are to be completely frank, the military reason for our aid to Europe, which the committee does not unduly stress, the other reasons are stated, with similar length and thoroughness.

FURTHER EVIDENCE of the committee's candor is its admission that shipments of scarce goods, especially food, to Europe would "add to the inflationary pressures at home." The committee, however, says that the threat of inflation can be dealt with. It expressly says that it does not itself deal with domestic inflation, further than to say what candor calls for, that "the immediate economic danger to the United States is inflation."

One wishes this committee would now take up inflation. A strong and cheering impression made by this report is the capacity of America to find men to deal with immensely vast and complex national questions in a manner utterly free from politics or ideology. The committee is, in its own words, "a public rather than a governmental body." Its range of economic thought embraces its chairman, Mr. Averill Harriman, who as Secretary of Commerce is a symbol of conservatism; and former Wisconsin Senator Robert M. La Follette, exponent of a true American liberalism that resists totalitarian economy or government. A strong characteristic of this committee is its freedom from any bureaucratic point of view. As many as 50 times the report emphasizes that foreign aid should be administered within a framework set up by Congress.

War Peril Not Ended, Clay's Deputy Warns

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. C. R. Huebner, deputy commander of United States forces in Europe, said in an Armistice Day statement, released today, that the world must realize "the danger of war is not ended."

"American dead of World War II far outnumbered those who died in World War I," Huebner said. "So, on this Armistice Day (Tuesday) it behooves us to look forward as well as backward.

"If we again fail to preserve the peace, a more destructive and tragic war may wipe out all for which our dead fought and gave their lives.

"Therefore, we of the United States ground and services forces in Europe should today dedicate ourselves to successful accomplishment of the peaceful mission on which we are now engaged."

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, commander of the European command and United States military governor of Germany, declared in his Armistice Day statement:

"When we have established a permanent peace, we shall have kept faith with those Americans who died to halt the aggression by (men) who sought to enslave mankind."

to the clergy. Among the guests were Caeser Aiello, mayor of Hyattsville; Luis Granados, Grand Knight of the Prince Georges Council, and other Knights of Columbus officials from the State of Maryland. A number of war veterans from Maryland University and other places were present.

Several hundred persons attended the services at the Unknown Soldier's Tomb, sponsored by the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association, with the cooperation of the District YMCA's. Dr. E. Cordell Powers, executive secretary of the Baltimore Bible Society, was principal speaker.

Wreaths were placed on the tomb by Howard M. Stackhouse, of Emory Methodist Church, Brightwood, for the Organized Bible Class Association, and by Dr. Page McK. Etchison, for the YMCA, of which he is religious work secretary. Etchison is also president of the OBCA. The Rev. Thomas B. Ehlers, pastor of Brightwood Methodist Church, gave the invocation.

The Rev. Wilfrid Parsons, S. J., of Catholic University faculty, yesterday urged Americans to send "cargoes of hope and freedom and goodwill" along with material relief to Europe.

Delivering the first of a series of radio broadcasts on "The Defenses of Peace," sponsored by the National Council of Catholic Men, Father Parsons said:

"Hope is the unseen cargo in every ship that carries food and fuel to Europe. But America has more than that to give. America has freedom; she has freedom such as no other country in the world possesses. That is why, along with all the grain and the coal and the rest, there must go in all the cargo ships the message and the promise of freedom; the message that when freedom is lost, all is lost; the promise that when the human soul finds itself again, it will find itself the mast of its destiny, the captain of its freedom."

In other church activities, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Mowatt last night presented a plaque to the Mowatt Memorial Methodist Church, Greenbelt, in memory of their son, Lieut. Frank G. Mowatt, a flier killed over Germany September 9, 1944. The service there commemorated "Armistice Sunday" and also the first anniversary of the congregation under its present name.

Members of the Washington French Congregation, meeting at St. John's Parish hall, 16th and H sts. nw., sponsored an "Armistice Sunday" service and also rites honoring the French war dead.

President to Lead Armistice Day Rites

President Truman will lead the Nation's Armistice Day ceremonies at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

7 Discharged State Employes Promised Civil Service Hearing

question where the Civil Service Commission, with State Department and FBI files, would be in a position to state the charge so that it could be met by the accused men. The attorneys hope to clear up that point today.

On yesterday's radio program one of the discharged employes appeared as "Mr. Blank" and the other as "Mr. Y."

Both speakers said they have families and have been looking for jobs without success. Arnold declared "the State Department has pursued these men into private life with letters to prospective employers."

"Mr. Blank," said he is "deeply resentful" of being considered a bad security risk, "because I have served my country faithfully for five years."

"During the war I handled top secret aircraft data—more secret data than anything I ever handled since at the State Department, and there was not one iota of criticism. Now Secretary Marshall has made me a stranger in my own country.'"

"Mr. Y" said he was a former college teacher and had come to Washington at the outbreak of the that I have never done anything wrong or improper," he said, "but I do not know any effective means war at the request of a Government agency. After 3½ years, he continued, he was transferred to the State Department, not at his request, and had planned to return to teaching after only a few months more with the department.

"Mr. Y" declared he did not know what has made him a "menace" to the Government. In looking for a job, he said, he is met with the stigma of having been dismissed as a potential security risk and asked whether he is guilty or innocent.

"I can only answer by saying of answering charges that have never been stated."

Arnold said his firm had offered to drop the case if the State Department could show any evidence of disloyalty against their clients, or any information they had not disclosed. The firm took the case "as a matter of public duty," he declared, as "the principle was too important to be neglected."

The former Assistant Attorney General said that even if the Civil Service Commission or the President's new Loyalty Board granted a hearing to the seven security dischargees, the State Department "still considers these people dangerous and defies them to get employment with that stigma on them."

Dr. Florence Sabin Awarded Medal For Achievement

New York, Nov. 9 (AP).—Dr. Florence R. Sabin of Denver, 76, public health crusader and research physician, today was awarded the 1947 American Women's Association medal for achievement.

The award was presented at the organization's annual "friendship dinner."

Dr. Sabin, who retired from a career of research in tuberculosis and cancer at the age of 67, began a "second career" in her native Colorado which led to changes in the State Public Health set-up, new legislation, and reorganization of the Denver Health Department.

Dr. Sabin received her medical degree from Johns Hopkins in 1900 and remained there as an interne, assistant in anatomy and professor of Histology until 1925.

Wage Hike Asked By Textile Union

Boston, Nov. 9 (AP).—A general wage increase of 15 cents an hour for 100,000 workers in northern cotton and rayon mills was asked today by the CIO Textile Workers Union—24 hours after voting to seek a 20-cent boost for 80,000 woolen-worsted employes.

Emile Rieve, general president of the union, said the cotton-rayon proposal would cover members employed in 125 mills in New England and the Middle Atlantic States, and would establish a minimum of $1.03 an hour, compared with 88 cents at present. Average hourly earnings, now $1.07, would rise to $1.22, he said.

The new wage proposal coincided with a TWUA announcement in New York that the union had negotiated a 9 per cent wage increase amounting to 19 million dollars a year for 125,000 Southern cotton textile workers—about one-fifth of all cotton mill workers in the South. The Southern minimum rises to 87 cents an hour.

TWUA has negotiated four wage increases in the Northern cotton-rayon industry since VJ-Day, the most recent a five-cents-an-hour hike August 1, 1947. Other boosts were 10 cents an hour January 1, 1947, eight cents in August, 1946, and eight cents in November, 1945.

Spray, N. C., Nov. 9 (AP).—The Washington representative of the CIO Textile Workers Union of America said here tonight the union "will collect small sums of money from thousands of members" in an effort to elect "more liberal" Senators and Representatives in Southern States.

John W. Edelman said in a speech prepared for a union meeting "with only a few exceptions, the Senators and Congressmen from the Southern States represent minority or class interests, and constantly act against the best interests of the majority of their constituents."

Reuther Wins Fight in UAW

alluded again to charges made more directly the previous day in his annual report—charges of Communist interference in the affairs of the union and of party-line methods of the opposition.

Thomas, for his part, released a blast at Reuther on the issue of signing what he termed the "yellow-dog" anti-communist affidavits required under the Taft-Hartley Act.

He alleged that the union's executive board had voted against signing the oaths, but that Reuther, without right or authority, re-polled the group and reported a majority in favor of complying.

Charges Are Exchanged

Thomas himself refused, and as a consequence had been charged by Reuther with "conduct unbecoming a union member." It was actually Reuther, Thomas stated, who acted in violation of a formal decision of the board.

But most of the charges and counter-charges were not to be heard from the rostrum today. Rather, they were epidemic on the boardwalk and at the delegates' tables.

Following a bitter campaign of several months, the anti-Reuther faction continued allegations that the president was "the bosses' boy", that he betrayed the union in the disastrous Allis-Chalmers strike, that he was in favor of cooperating with the hated Taft-Hartley Act.

Reuther's lieutenants, meantime, made much of charges broached the previous day, to the effect that Thomas was conniving with the AFL United Mine Workers boss, John L. Lewis, to take over the Auto Workers.

They added their firm conviction that Lewis and Communist money has been paying for most of the anti-Reuther campaign literature (there being no other visible source of funds for the expensive publication effort).

Lewis Alliance Feared

Finally, they declared, the story of Reuther being willing to run as vice president on the ticket of presidential candidate Robert A. Taft was a "plant" engineered by an attorney of Lewis' District 50 union of the Mine Workers.

Reuther's supporters insist that there remains a danger of the left-wing group attempting to lead away some UAW locals to join up with Lewis. Terming the leaders of this group Communist, or at least party liners, Reuther's "kitchen cabinet" say that there is precedent for a Lewis-left-wing alliance.

During the period of the German-Russian alliance, they recall, Lewis was out of the AFL and discredited by all factions of the CIO except the Communists, who supported him.

Communist allegations at that period that the war was "imperialist" tied in with Lewis' isolationist position.

20,000 Asked to Obtain 5 Chest Gifts a Day

Reports of rising public enthusiasm for the success of the current Community Chest Federation campaign came yesterday from all participating units.

Simultaneously, campaign leaders emphasized that all segments of the city's population—trades unionists, management representatives, religious and educational leaders, housewives—are working "in real unity of purpose" to raise the money needed to run 125 Chest-supported agencies in the Greater Washington area. Workers seek to exceed the $3,900,000 quota.

Campaign Chairman Edward H. Foley, jr., determined to record pledges totaling at least 50 per cent of the goal by Wednesday, called on the 20,000 volunteer solicitors to secure "at least five gifts a day."

If their efforts are successful, Foley pointed out, there will be an additional 200,000 gifts to announce at the drive's first report meeting, scheduled for 12:30 p. m. Wednesday in the Chamber of Commerce Building.

He revealed that many small sections of the Federal offices in the Government unit have already oversubscribed their quotas. He pointed out that this unit's 8000 volunteers have been soliciting since October 14, and thus have more favorable reports than many other units fully under way only a few days.

Two offices of the department of the Army announced that they had passed 120 per cent of their quotas. These were the office of the chief of finance, which hit 130 per cent, and the office of the provost marshal general, with more than 120 per cent.

In announcing Morris' appointment, O'Connor reported that since 1943 infantile paralysis has stricken some 80,000 Americans.

The forthcoming drive, scheduled January 15 to 30, will mark the tenth anniversary of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, he pointed out.

War Phychosis Grips U. S., Laborite Reports

London, Nov. 9 (AP).—John Haire, Laborite members of Parliament, who returned recently from a two months' visit in the United States and Canada, said tonight that "war psychosis such as Roosevelt never knew before Pearl Harbor" had descended upon North America.

Chest Agency Aids Mother

child and the other child in the family.

The FSA handled other problems, equally serious, but more curable than blindness. A distressed mother came in to the FSA office to report that her daughter was "stealing again."

Only What She Needed

She said that some years ago her daughter had stolen things and then she had stopped. And now she was starting it again. She didn't steal things she didn't need, it was always something that she could wear. And she only stole when she didn't have the money to buy what she thought she needed.

The mother explained that she didn't make much money, and that the cost of living was so high she had to cut her daughter's allowance. She said she didn't like to give her daughter money because she was afraid she wouldn't spend it wisely.

FSA personnel found the root of the trouble pretty quickly. It was the mother's anxiety which was forcing her daughter to steal. Afraid of her mother's displeasure at the purchases she could afford to make with the money she had, she had resorted to stealing so that she could dress like the other girls in her class at school.

Allowed to Take Job

Soon, the girl came to her mother and asked permission to take a part-time job. The mother was advised to give permission for the job, and to let the girl assume entire control of the money she earned. It was explained to her that if she approved her child's purchases as often as possible, and pointed out, specifically, where she had shown good taste, the girl would be encouraged to exercise good taste more frequently.

And with this new understanding between mother and daughter, the girl has stopped stealing, and is happier both at home and school than her mother had dreamed possible.

These two problems—serious problems to the people they concerned—were solved by the FSA without the actual expenditure of any money. FSA was able to solve them because it had trained personnel on hand who could point out the real problems, and then, with tact and understanding, offer the proper solution.

The FSA is a nonsectarian organization which performs case work service for families and individuals who find themselves in difficulties they are unable to resolve themselves.

And the Family Service Association is one of the agencies which you help to support with your contribution to the Community Chest Federation.

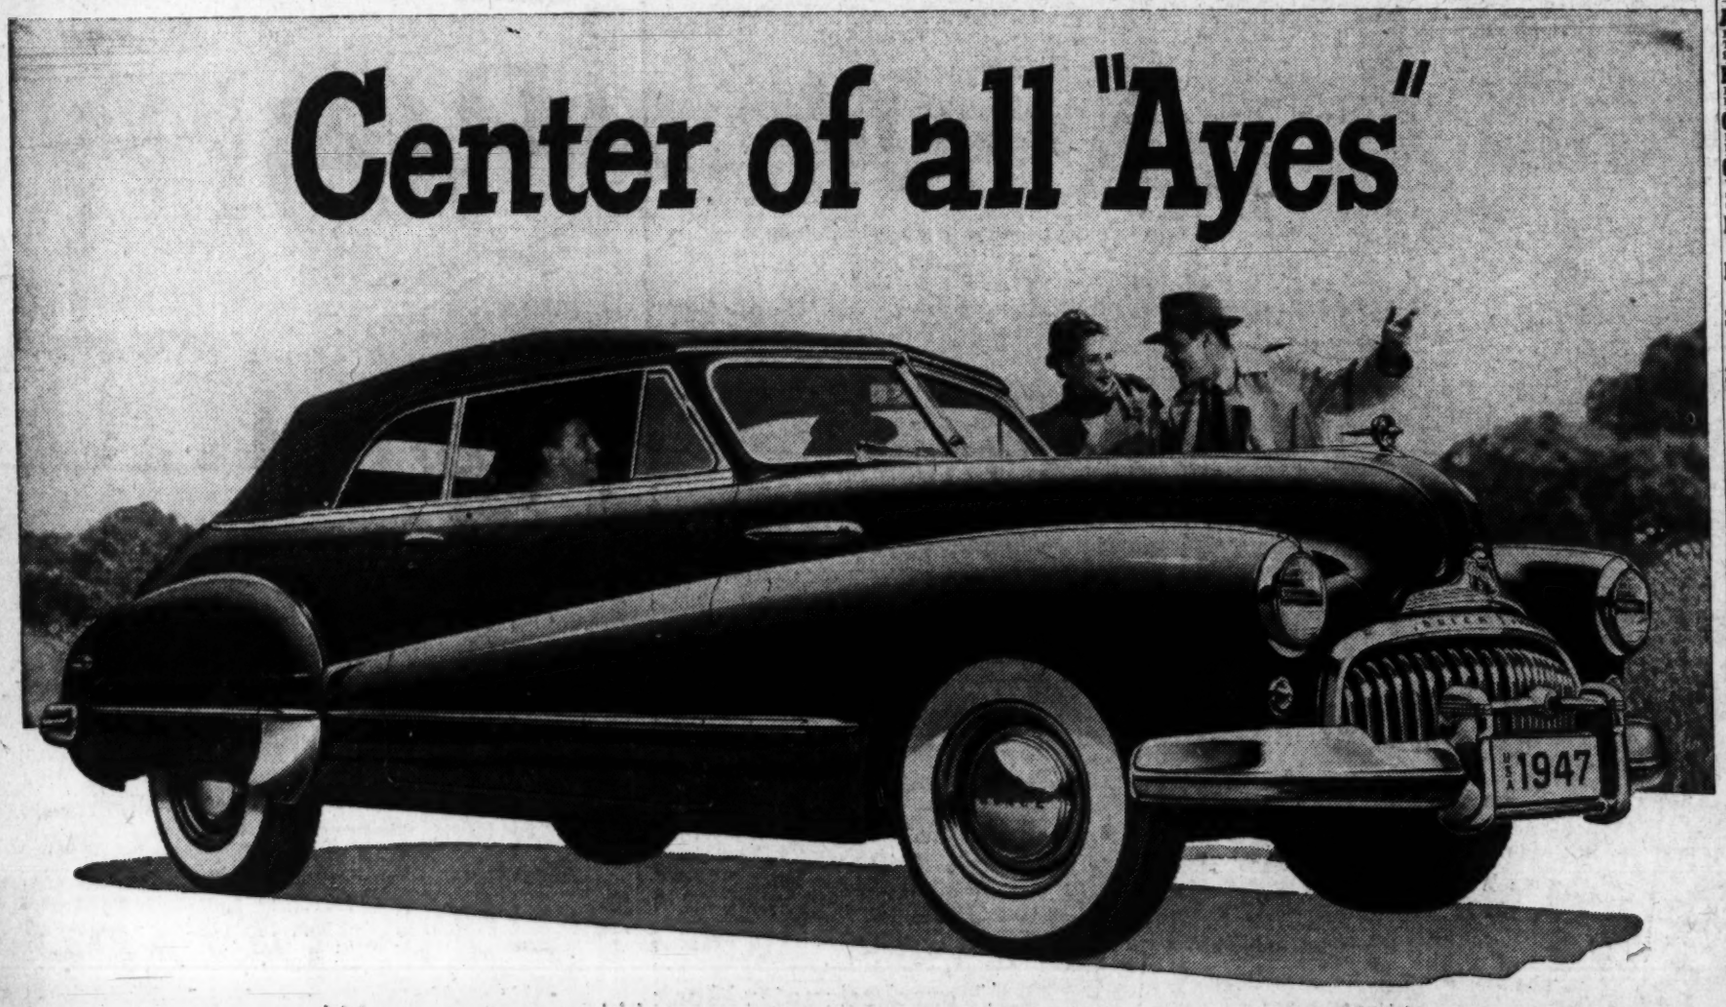
Center of all "Ayes"



You look over those long, clean lines, free and flowing as the wind — and you say "Aye!" to that.

You slip behind the ready wheel, settle yourself in deep, soft cushions — and once more the "Ayes" have it.

You finger the little buttons that run the door windows up or down, test out the control that at a touch positions the front seat for you — and those things win your nod.

Now put foot to treadle. There's the quick answer of eight big Fireball cylinders, tossing down a challenge to go adventuring.

Look over the top. A pull on a knob will swing it back out of the way — yet you find it tight and snug against the nippiest of November winds.

Make a little test run, picking out roads not noted for their smoothness.

They're ironed level by four coil springs, cushioned by Safety-Ride rims that get 25-lb. softness from standard 30-lb.-pressure tires.

A FINGER TOUCH — and the door window runs up or down automatically. Similar controls raise or lower the top and adjust the front seat.

You test the wheel, the brakes, the room, the road-hugging steadiness. They all win "Ayes" as America's most wanted automobile shows why it is just that.

Centered here are all the good things you want in a car—including style that stands all alone for sheer beauty and as a forecast of coming things.

So why hold back?

Be as smart as those who've gone before you and get your order in, with or without a car to trade, soon as you can.

Integrity Marks Film About POWs

By Richard L. Coe

"THE CAPTIVE HEART," at the Hippodrome, is a finely made, deeply moving and honest film about a difficult subject—Britishers in a German prisoner of war camp during the war.

This import is British to the core. It has the integrity one associates with the better English films—honesty of setting, restraint of character and dignity of purpose.

The story it tells is possibly unlikely, but then so were many things which happened during the war. A Czech who has escaped from a concentration camp hides his identity by assuming that of a dead British officer. Captured, he spends four years with the British in a German POW camp and protects his life by writing to the wife of the man whose identity cards he holds.

Most of the film is devoted to the years in the lonely camp. By purposefully portraying the dullness of the life, the film attempts a matter that is pictorially daring. And somehow it comes off effectively, the endless procession of seasons in a lonely spot which, to its inhabitants, becomes a world in itself. It is effective because the approach is uncompromising.

This is done through natural casting. While the leading characters are played by professional actors, the film was made through active cooperation of Britain's Army of the Rhine and one of the Highland divisions. The men seem to be real and their speech is pretty realistic. (You'll even notice one spot in the soundtrack which evidently has been clipped to accommodate the chaste ears of American audiences.)

"THE CAPTIVE HEART." Universal International-Prestige release, produced by Ealing studios of Michael Balcon. Screenplay by Angus McPhail and Guy Morgan from a story by Patrick Kirwan. Directed by Basil Dearden. Music by Alan Rawsthorn, played by the Philharmonia Orchestra. At the Hippodrome.

Praise for Red Cross Aid

There's a one-pipper, a subaltern who goes blind because the Germans refuse a necessary eye operation. There are two "other rankers"—a private and a corporal who've been in business together before the war; the wife of one dies in childbirth shortly after he becomes a prisoner. There are the lads who say "Bob's your uncle," and who sing that song which one will always identify with World War II—"Bless 'Em All."

The importance of Red Cross packages and mail from home provide a heartening example of what you yourself may have done during those bleak days. The indefiniteness of "the duration" is the hardest thing these men have to bear and how important little incidents can be in admirably dramatized.

It's interesting, too, that the portrayal of the Germans reflects what one used to hear of them as POW caretakers during the war. They were considerably more humane than their Italian allies and the British filmmakers are faithful to this idea. Some of our personal friends were prisoners of the Italians and we recall they always used to say they wished they'd been caught by the Germans. While there are signs of Sadism in "The Captive Heart," they are of individual cases; the overall picture respects the international covenants.

Romance by Mail

The Czech (a professor of English from Prague, finely played by Michael Redgrave) ultimately meets the widow he has been corresponding with in the guise of her husband and the film suggests that their paper love will come to fruition. This fact has been handled with enough understanding to make such an idea acceptable.

The acting is knowingly done, with Redgrave's leading role outstanding. Rachel Kempson, his real-life wife, plays the woman whose letters comfort him and you'll find such noted British players as Frederick Leister, as her father; Elliot Mason, as the Scottish subaltern's mother; Basil Radford, as the major whose prewar interest was racing; and Ralph Michael (remember him at the National in "Love Goes to Press"?) as a medical officer.

There's nothing gay or glamorous about it, but there is an honesty and integrity about "The Captive Heart" which makes it an admirable film.

A FULL WEEK is this one on the downtown screens. Keith's has moved up its opening day to tomorrow for the Walt Disney-Edgar Bergen comedy, "Fun and Fancy Free" . . . Unless "Forever Amber" surprises the Palace, "Body and Soul" will be moving in on Thursday . . . That same day "Lost Moment" goes into the Capitol, "Christmas Eve" opens at the Warner and "Heaven Only Knows" takes over at the Metropolitan.

ARMISTICE DAY—tomorrow—will find matinees in all the Warner neighborhood houses, including a 10:15 a. m., opening for the Central. All the other Warner houses will start off their first shows at 1 o'clock.

FROM SILVER SPRING Anne Cunningham points out that "Northwest Outpost" with Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey was not reviewed in these pages. As it soon will be playing the neighborhood houses, we pass along Miss Cunningham's lines: "A better-than-average musical. Nelson Eddy (who has never looked or sounded better) and exquisite Ilona Massey handle the romantic roles very well indeed, while Elsa Lanchester and Hugo Haas are a priceless combination in their thoroughly sophisticated comedy scenes. The Friml melodies are delightful and there is a beautifully done Russian Easter hymn." In short, Miss Cunningham recommends it.

TOMORROW: In the final editions Richard L. Coe will review the National's "Song of Norway," the operetta based on music by Edvard Grieg which opens a two-week run tonight.

India to Run Hindu State Of Junagadh Temporarily

New Delhi (Monday), Nov. 10 (AP). Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru said today the Dominion of India had taken over, on a "temporary" basis, the administration of the predominantly Hindu state of Junagadh, whose Moslem ruler acceded originally to Pakistan.

Nehru told newsmen Pakistan had been invited to send a representative to Junagadh to meet an Indian minister "within a few days."

Pakistan was not consulted in advance of India's quick action in taking over the state's administration on the request of Shah Newzaz Bhutto, Prime Minister of the 4100 square-mile state, to assume control.

Asked whether India were not running the risk of incurring Pakistan hostility by the action, Nehru said Pakistan must have known that Junagadh had asked India to save the administration from collapse.

An Indian spokesman said the Jungadh Prime Minister asked India to take over "in order to save Junagadh from complete administrative breakdown, and pending an honorable settlement of several issues involved in the Junagadh decision."

Junagadh, with a population of 800,000, is a princely state situated on the Kathiawar Peninsula midway between Karachi and Bombay.

Because it is surrounded by several hundred tiny states which already acceded to India, India has disputed its accession to Pakistan.

India has demanded that Junagadh be permitted to decide by plebiscite to which dominion it wishes to accede. Pakistan reportedly has agreed in principle to a plebiscite.

When Junagadh acceded originally to Pakistan, India posted several battalions of troops at strategic border points. An Indian spokesman said this was done to bolster the confidence of the predominantly Hindu population.

The spokesman said these factors contributed to the current situation in Junagadh: The Nawab of Junagadh, now in Karachi, did not leave sufficient funds in the treasury to continue governmental operation, and Moslems have infiltrated from other Pakistan areas, creating fear among the Hindus.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Friendship Train Rolls Across the Country

By Drew Pearson

Aboard the Friendship Train.—Thousands of people have been down to greet the Friendship Train all along the line to watch its boxcars, packed ceiling high with wheat, roll on toward Europe.

But the real story of this train is the story of American teamwork—the kind of teamwork that this country always shows when the need arises.

For instance, American Legion posts, 64 of them, all over Los Angeles County, got together, reorganized the wartime car pools they hadn't used since gasoline rationing ended, to carry 100-pound sacks of flour to food-collection centers.

Then there were the teamsters. Ray Leheney, head of the Los Angeles Teamsters Union, not only helped collect the food, but also organized the employers. The truck owners donated the trucks, the union men donated the labor, and, for approximately 96 hours, teamsters answered calls picking up sacks of beans, flour and sugar all over Los Angeles County.

A teamsters' union employe also worked overtime at a special switchboard installed by the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. which relayed calls regarding food pickups, including calls from nearby ranches and grain elevators.

War Widows' Sacrifice

A woman called up the friendship train headquarters in Los Angeles, said she was a war widow—a member of a club composed of 19 war widows, all of whom draw pensions of less than $100 a month. Yet these women, who already had made the greatest sacrifice for their country, had colleteed $200 among themselves to buy flour for the train.

Then there were the motion picture stars, oft-maligned and not often applauded for their citizenship. In order to give the train a send-off, stars were asked to perform, but they needed clearance from their union. Ronald Reagan, president of the Screen Actors Guild, agreed immediately.

The Screen Actors Guild also furnished a carload of evaporated milk to be attached to the train. Matching this, the Screen Directors Guild donated a car.

Hawaii Donates Sugar

In San Francisco, a call came that the people of Hawaii, responding to the appeal of the Friendship Train, had pooled their pennies to buy a carload of sugar. The average donation was 8 cents apiece.

Stainback

Gov. Ingram Stainback of Hawaii flew to the mainland in a "friendship plane" to present the sugar. Even before he arrived, however, the Hawaiian contribution had swollen from one to two carloads.

It has been the same story all along the line of the train. American farmers have been way ahead of Congress in their realization that the food is now a vital instrument of American foreign policy.

Farsighted Harry Warner

Harry Warner, 67 years old, because of illness had retired from the motion picture business. When asked to become chairman of the Friendship Train Committee, Warner, against doctor's orders and with a desk piled high with medicine, accepted. Within 48 hours he had forgotten all about his sickness.

Meanwhile, the railroads, which are hauling this train free of charge; Western Union, which has contributed a sizable amount of free telegrams; the Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions Clubs, many of the churches, the Chamber of Commerce, the veterans, groups, school children, labor unions and businessmen—all are pulling together in the cities along the line in the type of cooperation which makes democracy live.

Brash Real Estate Lobby

You have to hand it to the real estate lobby. Among its members, at least, they are not only honest, but amazingly brash about crowing over their achievements. When the lobby scores a victory over Congress, the boys come right out and say so in the lobby's "confidential" bulletin.

Most effective real estate lobbyist in Washington is Morton Bodfish of the United States Savings and Loan League. In his "monthly real estate letter," Bodfish's organization recently reported that real estate operators would make an increased profit under the new rent law of 34.9 per cent "before depreciation."

Just a few months ago when the real estate lobby was ramming the rent increase through Congress, the boys were publicly wailing that real estate operators could scarcely make a living.

The contrast here is what they said privately in their own news bulletin after the act was passed: "The effect of the new rent law on earnings of rental buildin and, hence, on values and ma prices—is the subject of a deal of mental speculation. On basis of a broad survey of t story, walk-up operating fig the following facts are interes "1. If a typical unfurni walk-up building gets 15 per more from all of its tenants remains 100 per cent occu (which it certainly will), its return—assuming 1946 oper expenses and taxes—will sho increase of 34.9 per cent b depreciation.

"An across-the-board increa 15 per cent in apartment rentals at 100 per cent occup would produce much more im sive gains in net income than unfurnished structures, even the anticipated increases in op ting expense."

Note to United States Hou Administrator Wood: In view the current demand of local estate boards for rent hikes, above should interest you.

Jewish Welfare Unit Pledges Support for Food Conservation

Pledges of full support to the President's food conservation program highlighted the final session here yesterday of the National Jewish Welfare Board's Middle Atlantic Section.

About 200 delegates, representing 50,000 members in Jewish centers in the District, Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia, concluded their two-day conference at the Jewish Community Center, 1529 16th st. nw.

Indorsement of the food-saving plan followed the recommendations of the Jewish Center Division Committee of the NJWB at its annual conference in New York City four weeks ago.

Other issues indorsed were the recent report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights, the majority report of the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine, the Stratton bill calling for the admission of displaced persons to this country, and the plan for a Young Men's-Young Women's Hebrew Association in Palestine.

The delegates also agreed "to strengthen the United Nations to the end that peace will prevail in the world."

Lynn Hirshorn, of Allentown, Pa., program chairman and vice president of the section, was elected president at the closing business session. He succeeds Lewis Nathan, of Philadelphia.

The conclusions of a year-long survey of the NJWB's program were accepted and referred to the 35 centers in the section for further study. The survey was conducted by Dr. Oscar Janowsky, professor in the College of the City of New York.

Fred Kogod, president of the Jewish Community Center, presided at the sessions. Rabbi Harry Silverstone of the Congregation Tifereth Israel Synagogue, 1401 Euclid st. nw., gave the invocation at the luncheon session yesterday.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Jewish Program Would Help Judaism, Win Understanding

Chicago, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—The 1947 conference of the Jewish Theological Seminary today adopted a four-point program designed to intensify Jewish adherence to Judaism and to advance understanding among all Americans of the Jewish faith and culture.

The plan, drafted and presented by the Committee on Organization, headed by Michael A. Stavitsky, Newark, N. J., was adopted by 160 delegates from all sections of the Nation.

Maxwell Abbell, Chicago businessman, was chosen by a unanimous vote to direct the program and head a Nation-wide campaign for a $1,500,000 fund necessary to maintain the educational activities of the seminary, the United Synagogue of America, and the Rabbinical Assembly of America.

The rabbinical assembly and united synagogue cooperated in sponsoring the conference.

The program calls for strengthening the influence of Judaism in every Jewish community, and for strengthening inter-faith cooperation in America by:

"1. Meeting the increasing need for adequately trained Jewish religious, educational, communal leadership through the enlarged schools for the seminary.

"2. Enriching Jewish life by restoring the synagogue as the spiritual, cultural and social center of the Jewish community.

"3. Advancing the Jewish education of children and adults by aiding communities in achieving higher standards and increased enrollment.

"4. Fostering American understanding of Jews and Judaism through the seminary's comprehensive program of public education."

Spokesmen said major features of educational program include the "Eternal Light" radio broadcasts, the Institute for Religious and Social Studies, the Jewish Museum, which houses a collection of Jewish art and ceremonial objects, and the seminary library.

Arthur Oppenheimer, New York, treasurer of the seminary, ...ing in behalf of the prog... scribed the Jewish people ... United States as "the lar... strongest and in every s... primary Jewish community ... world."

Skins Stalled on Two in Last Minute, Lose, 21-14

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

FORBES FIELD, PITTSBURGH, Nov. 9.—Art Rooney's Steelers, with the Eastern Division lead to protect, are first on the field that is rimmed by 3000 standees. Any minute now the Redskins, owned by that beloved figure of pro football, George Preston Marshall, will show up.

POVICH

The Redskins showed up and lost the toss, but the Steelers didn't go anywhere after the kickoff, and the Redskins have the ball on Bob Cifers' punt to the Washington 38. Pittsburgh's record pro football crowd of 36,257 is in the stands.

The Redskins are going nowhere, either. On that last play there were five men in the Redskin backfied, including Charley Mehelic, Steeler end, who smeared Jim Castiglia for a five-yard loss.

Quarterback Johnny Clement of the Steelers is hogging the ball at this point. He called his own signal three times in a row, ripped off two seven-yard gains at right end and then smacked 31 yards through center to the Washington 13.

THE SUN IS OUT and it's a nice day for football, but right now you could rightfully say the Redskins' defense is very inclement.

7-0, Pittsburgh. Steve Lach, who played for Duke before he won a scholarship to Rooney Tech, takes it over from the 1-yard line. Dr. Jock Sutherland, a practicing dentist before becoming a football coach, takes a look at the scoreboard and says "This won't hurt a bit."

BOB CIFERS KICKS the Steelers out of trouble and the Redskins into it. He gets off a 67-yard punt that bounds outside on the Washington 4-yard line, and the Redskins demonstrate a lot of push at the wrong moment. They are penalized half the distance to the goal, or two yards, for pushing.

The Steelers are on the Redskins' 12-yard line. Twenty-eight yards ago Johnny Clement threw a pass to Val Jansante, against what looks like a de-emphasized Redskin pass defense.

Tony Campagno, 200-pound fullback from St. Mary's, gets into the act for the Steelers with a 10-yard smash to the Redskins' 2, and one play later it's 14-0, Steelers. Campagno took it over through what was the Redskins' line.

LATE IN THE SECOND quarter the Redskins are putting on a drive, but unfortunately, they don't have the ball. The Steelers were penalized 15 yards for clipping, and a bit later Terreshinski smeared Clements for a big loss and its third down and 40 to go for Pittsburgh.

Touchdown, Redskins. Baugh didn't trifle on those last two plays. He threw a 22-yard pass to Joe Duckworth, and then a 26-yard touchdown pass to Hugh Taylor in the end zone, and the Redskins are nicely back in the ball game.

The Steelers are rushing Baugh after the second half kickoff and he fails to get his passes away. It's what I call Jock Sutherland's e pluribus unum defense—all for one.

THERE'S NO CLEMENCY in Clement. He just threw to Jansante for a first down on the Redskins' 47, and then he sent Bob Cifers around left end for 22 yards more, and then he pitched to Jansante for a first down on the Redskins' 15.

21-7, Steelers. Clement is completely deceitful and never to be trusted. He just faked a pass and then skeedadled 18 yards to a touchdown through the middle of the hornswoggled Redskins.

If you're a Redskin fan and the frigid weather doesn't leave you cold, the Redskins' defense will.

BUT THE REDSKINS are doing better now. They're on the Steelers' 3 after two superb Baugh-to-Nussbaumer passes . . . in fact, they have another touchdown, with Jim Castiglia going over on fourth down, and the Steelers' lead is cut to 21-14.

The Steelers went nowhere with the ball, and now their pass defense against Baugh is as bewildered as a chicken hatched in an egg beater. Baugh whipped two pitches to Poillon, and the tying touchdown is only seven yards distant.

On fourth down, Baugh tried to throw another seven, but it was no dice. The ball slipped off Turley's fingertips in the end zone, and the Redskins scored a touchback, which is never to be confused with a touchdown. The next sound you hear will be that of the final gun.

Claim Yard Markers Moved

Rollers Beat Arrow Linen, 12-0; Losers File Protest

The Metropolitan Football League's 160-pound Eastern championship still remained in doubt last night after Arrow Linen dropped a protested 12-to-0 game to the Riverside Rollers on Heartt Playground.

Arrow's loss ordinarily would have given the title to Southeast A. C. but the Linen team protested a fourth-quarter incident and the matter now must be decided by a special board which is expected to act today.

The incident occurred with the Rollers leading 6 to 0. Two 15-yard penalties set them back to their own 27-yard line on third down with 35 to go. Riverside completed a pass to its own 40-yard line and it should have been fourth down and 22 yards to go for a first down.

Coach Stephens J. Lukacs of Arrow Linen contended, however, that during the two penalties the yard-marking sticks were moved mistakenly, giving the Rollers a first down.

Umpire Gil Martin stepped in and attempted to call the play but was overruled by Referee Irvine Holbrook. Lukacs protested to the officials and later lodged a formal protest with League Secretary Ray Henderson.

Henderson announced that a special board would be appointed by President Andy Farkas of the league to act on the protest. If Arrow's protest is upheld, Henderson said the game must be replayed If the protest is overruled, Southeast will win the tittle with six victories against one loss compared to Arrow Linen's record of five wins, one loss and one tie.

The game was one of six closing the Metropolitan League season. Other results yesterday were: 160-pound—Anacostia Lions, 13; Shamrocks, 0.

Unlimited class — Anacostia Eagles 12, Arlington Merchants 6; Potomac Post No. 40, 19, Snug Harbor 12; Falls Church 22, Mount Rainier Merchants 0; Car Credit 32, Prince Georges Merchants 0.

Bears Block Field Goal Try, Beat Packers 20-17

Chicago, Nov. 9 (AP).—The Chicago Bears staged two brilliant goal-line stands and blocked a game-tying field goal try in the last 18 seconds to outlast the Green Bay Packers, 20-17, in a National Football League thriller before an overflow crowd of 46,112 at Wrigley Field today.

The thrilling Bear win avenged an earlier 29-to-20 setback at Green Bay and enabled the defending champions to stay within one game of the pace setting Chicago Cardinals in the league's Western Division race.

The Cards and Bears meet at Wrigley Field in the final game of the regular season December 14.

With time running out, Ward Cuff's field goal try from Chicago's 29 was blocked by Halfback Noah Mullins and the champions were desperately holding the ball within their own 5 as the final gun sounded.

The Packers were stopped after piercing to the Bears' 3 in the second period and after advancing to the Chicago 1 in third. Both times the Packers had four downs to make less then 6 yards.

The luckless Packers jumped to a 10-0 lead in the Wild-scoring second period on Wally Schlinkman's 15-yard touchdown smash and a brilliant 50-yard field goal by Ted Fritsch.

This margin was short-lived though, when the Bears came back to score two touchdowns in the same period, within a span of 1:58. The first Chicago touchdown came on a 50-yard march with Sid Luckman passing 31 to Ken Kavanaugh for a touchdown.

A fumble by Green Bay's Jack Jacobs on the Packer 19 set up the second Bear touchdown with the Chicagoans counting three plays later on Hugh Gallarneau's 8-yard smash in which he crawled the last yard.

Osmanski's Score Decides

The deciding Bear touchdown came in the third period on a 67-yard drive capped by Joe Osmanski's bull-like dash 24 yards through left tackle to score. Ray McLean, who converted after the two previous Bear touchdowns, missed this time, trying from the 17 after a Bear penalty.

The Packers gamely came back for the touchdown which pulled them to within three points with a 52-yard stab which paid off on an 8-yard shot from Jacobs to Bob Forte in the end zone. Cuff booted his second conversion and that made it the ultimate final score, 20-17.

The ball was in good position for Cuff's field-goal try from the 29, but Mullins shot through the Packer line to block the kick which barely squirted low into the end zone from where Nick Sacrinty ran it out to the 4. The game ended seconds later.

Which Way Did They Go?

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

EVERYTHING'S UP IN THE AIR these days, even in football. Here you see John Strzykalski, of the San Francisco 49ers, ending up in the arms of the New York Yankees' Center Lou Sossamon, in a position which could be described as an exercise for upset stomachs. Strzykalski trying for a touchdown wound up on the 2-yard line looking back the way he had come. The Yankees went on to win the the All-American Conference game in Yankee Stadium, 24-18.

Boston Yanks' Passes Upset Rams, 27 to 16

Los Angeles, Nov. 9 (AP).—The heads-up Boston Yanks, striking sharply on four quick thrusts, upset the luckless Los Angeles Rams, 27 to 16, today in a National Football League game before 19,415 spectators at Memorial Coliseum.

The Yanks, out played by a wide margin in every department except passing, utilized the accurate throwing arm of Frank (Boley) Dancewicz, former Notre Dame, to count three touchdowns, all made by End Don Currivan.

They added a final score in the closing seconds on an 11-yard end run by Johnny Photo after Mike Micka had run 50 yards with an intercepted pass.

The Yanks led 13-6 at half time, but had to come from behind to win after the Rams had scored 10 points in the third period.

The play that broke the Rams' back was a stunning 77-yard forward lateral from Dancewicz to End Harold Crisler to Currivan. Crisler took Dancey's 40-yard throw at the Rams' 37 and flipped to Currivan who went the rest of the way.

The desperate Rams came back to march 64 yards with Boston holding for downs on the Yanks' 11. After the punt out, Micka intercepted Bob Waterfield's pass on the Boston 37 and ran down the sidelines to the Rams' 13. Three plays later the game had a photo finish.

The aggressive Yanks scored in the first three minutes of play on a 47-yard pass from Dancewicz to Currivan. The same combination clicked again on a 51-yard job in the second quarter after Los Angeles had rolled 59 yards in eight plays to tie it up at 6-all.

Bob Hoffman went the final 4 yards for the Rams' first tally and repeated in the third frame, culminating a 53-yard drive.

Waterfield's 26-yard field goal late in the third period put the Rams in front, 16-13, after Jack Banta's interception of a Dancewicz pass set up the kick.

Gridder Gets Mad, Scores Five Times

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Nov. 9 (AP).—Carl Taseff, 19-year-old John Carroll University freshman student, became angered today when his team went into the last quarter against Niagara trailing, 26-14. So he decided to do something about it.

He had already scored a touchdown for Carroll in the third quarter on a 79-yard run.

The 170-pound second stringer poured it on the final period with touchdown runs of 76, 5, 28 and 18 yards, to give him five touchdowns for the game, as John Carroll won, 41-26.

Northwestern 'Beefs' to Big 9

Chicago, Nov. 9 (AP).—Informal criticism of last-quarter officiating in the Northwestern football game at Ohio State was made to Big Nine Commissioner Kenneth L. Wilson today by Dr. G. R. Lundquist, chairman of the Northwestern Faculty Athletic Committee, and Ted Payseur, athletic director.

The Buckeyes beat the Wildcats, 7 to 6, yesterday after a series of penalties had permitted Ohio State to score on four extra plays after regulation time had expired.

Payseur said Northwestern was not protesting the victory, but that the school did feel that Head Linesman E. C. Curtiss of Wheaton, Ill., was overzealous in calling an infraction of the rules on Northwestern when only 13 seconds remained. Payseur said he did not think the fault actually was with Curtiss, but rather with the rule.

Curtiss ruled that Northwestern had 12 men on the field when Tom Worthington of the Wildcats intercepted Pandel Savic's pass in the end zone on what normally would have been the last play.

Payseur said Ohio State did not employ a huddle and ran the play while Northwestern was trying to make a substitution. Since the play started before the Wildcats had time to clear the field, the penalty was called.

Cards Whip Lions, 17-7, to Protect Lead

Detroit, Nov. 9 (AP).—Breaking up a pair of third-period threats to avert a costly upset, the Chicago Cardinals, playing without their star running back, Charley Trippi, defeated the Detroit Lions, 17 to 7, here today to protect their Western Division lead in the National Football League.

Bill Decorrevont smashed across from the 1-yard line for the first Chicago touchdown after six minutes of play and Fullback Pat Harder booted a 15-yard field goal before the first period ended.

Lions Steal Play

The underdog Lions then stole the play for two full periods, scoring in the second on Clyde Le Force's 30-yard pass to End Johnny Green and blowing two great chances in the third after getting first down inside the Cardinal 10-yard line.

Walt Rankin recovered a fumble by Joey Watt to break up the first chance on the Cardinals 1-yard line and the Cards rose up to take the ball on downs the second time after the Lions had reached the 8.

Elmer Angsman climaxed an 80-yard Cardinal march late in the game by scoring from the 9-yard line with just 10 seconds of play remaining.

Harder Converts

Harder booted both the Chicago extra points and Leroy Zimmerman, whose attempt for a score—knotting field goal fell short from the 45-yard line in the fourth period, converted after the Detroit touchdown.

The crowd of 27,513 fans who braved freezing temperature to see the game, sensed the making of the pro league's biggest upset of the year when Watt intercepted one of Paul Christman's passes early in the third period and ran it to the Cardinals' 2-yard line before being thrown out of bounds by Vince Banonis.

But Rankin stole the ball from Watt on a line play a moment later and the cards thus averted trouble.

He's in Full Gloom

Tatum Trades in Saturated Crying Towel For Crepe As He Preps for North Carolina

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

JIM TATUM was in full gloom last night.

The expression of despair on his furrowed brow was more befitting a man who had been denied a stay of execution rather that a football coach whose team meets North Carolina Saturday.

But to Tatum, who could spot anybody 40 worries and still win the gloom championship, death and North Carolina are the same thing.

"They'll beat us by five or six touchdowns," moaned the Tar Heel alumnus who'll be matching tricks with his old coach, Carl Snavely, when the Terps and N. C. clash in Griffith Stadium.

Not even the motion pictures of Maryland's 32-0 victory over Duquesne Saturday brought a smile from Tatum. He normally starts to worry about a game only five days in advance, but this time he allowed himself another 24 hours of grief.

"Snavely is one of the most brilliant coaches in the business," he moaned. "Charlie Justice is a great back, they have three fine teams and are just now beginning to roll.

"Why they beat N. C. State 41-6 yesterday and State has a good club. You can write off those losses to Texas and Wake Forest.

"Nobody has ever beaten Texas down there in October and the Wake Forest defeat was a natural letdown as the result of that whipping in Texas. But they're rolling now and we can't stop them."

Tatum has more license to be despondent about his team's chances Saturday than at any time during the season. Maryland figures to be a three-touchdown underdog against Carolina, but the picture is not as gloomy as Tatum paints it.

He's just a natural worrier who frets when he can't find anything to fret about.

Before the Maryland opener with South Carolina he moaned: "We're just going down there for the ride."

Result; Maryland, 19—South Carolina, 13.

Before the Delaware-Maryland game: "Delaware is stronger than you think."

Result: Maryland 43-Delaware 19.

Before the Richmond-Maryland game: "Richmond is ready, we're not."

Result: Maryland 18-Richmond 6.

Before the Duke game: "We don't have a prayer."

Result: Duke 19-Maryland 7.

Before the V.P.I.-Maryland game: "Too many of our boys are hurt and V.P.I. is hot."

Result: Maryland 21-V.P.I. 19.

Before the West Virginia-Maryland game: "We'll be lucky to score."

Result: Maryland 27-West Virginai 0.

Before the Duquesne-Maryland game: "We're over confident."

Result: Maryland 32- Duquesne 0.

Reminded of his dire predictions last night, Tatum didn't even break a frown and drawled: "Yeah, but this time I mean it."

Rufe Watson Wins Skeet Shoot In His Honor

Rufe Watson of Laurel, Md., was tendered a testimonial skeet shoot and dinner yesterday by the National Capital Skeet Club.

One of the area's leading marksmen for the past 15 years, Watson, who is moving to Sumter, N. C., captured the 20-gauge championship in yesterday's shoot with a score of 96 out of 100.

Other winners included George Deyoe, who won the .410 title with 45 out of 50; Mrs. Charles Hottel, ladies' championship with 79 out of 100, and Don Slowe, junior championship with 87 out of 100.

Bill and Gene Day tied for the all-bore 12-gauge crown with 98 out of 100, but Bill downed his brother in a shoot-off to triumph. The Day brothers also took the two-man team title with a combined 196 out of 200.

Baugh's Pass Batted Out of Turley's Arms

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Pittsburgh, Nov. 9.—A last-minute goal-line stand by the Pittsburgh Steelers stalled the Washington Redskins on the 2-yard line here today, sealing a 21-14 victory for the host National Football League club before a standing-room-only crowd of 36,257 paying customers at Forbes Field.

The Steelers led from the first quarter on as they set a new Pittsburgh mark of five straight triumphs, retained their top spot in the Eastern Division standings, and squelched just about the last Redskin hope of getting anywhere this season.

It was the fifth setback in seven games for Washington's hopefuls—and it was administered by a team they'd beaten earlier, 27-26.

Touchdown Pass Batted Down

But it took the fiercest kind of bracing in the shadow of their own goal for the Steelers to protect their lead. That, and an unidetnified arm that flapped into the ball as Doug Turley was about to grab the touchdown that would have made it 21-20, with three minutes to play.

Washington made its dying bid for victory from its own 21. Sammy Baugh, you might have suspected, was the leader and prime hurler as the underdog Tribe, after cutting Pittsburgh's 21-7 margin to a single touchdown early in the fourth frame, marched goalward.

Sammy slung to Hugh Taylor for 8 yards, then to Dick Poillon who battled his way for 30 more. The big punch came on Baugh's second toss to Poillon, who grabbed the ball at hip height on the Steler 30 and made it a 28-yard pass play before two Steelers brought him down on the 7.

Steelers Take Over

Then Jim Castiglia, former Georgetown fullback who had scored once for the Redskins and sandwiched a bruising line smash between almost every Baugh pass, went to work. At right guard he got 2 yards, and on the left side he was held to no gain.

Baugh tired to sneak it over from the quarterback hole but managed for only 3 yards to the Steeler 2. Finally Baugh had to try a pass. It looked like a perfect shot to Turley but that arm, mentioned before, got in the way.

The Steelers, in possession, refused the Redskins even the chance that a punt would have allowed. They ran the ball as the clock ran out.

Castiglia Does Yeoman Job

In all, Baugh tried 19 passes, 10 of them good for 183 yards and one touchdown. That came in the second period on a 24-yard heave to Taylor. But the workhorse of the Redskins was Castiglia.

The squat former Philadelphia Eagle just about earned his season's keep with his work today. He carried the ball 28 times with his longest gain 13 yards. A mere 85 yards fell to Big Jim but his smashes were the only thing to put deception into Baugh's passes.

Meanwhile Johnny Clement, the East's leading ground gainer for Pittsburgh, was lugging the ball 16 times and picking up 79 yards with a 31-yard jaunt his longest. His smartest, however, was the 17-yard excursion that eventually won for the Steelers in the third quarter.

It was tacked on to a march from the host's 38 and followed two Clement passes, both to Val Jansante, for 12 and 10 yards. Bob Cifers got into the show for 22 yards more and the Redskins were braced for another Clement aerial when the payoff came.

Clement, the big zero on his chest flashing menacingly, drew back his arm once, then darted daintily into the middle of the Redskin defenses. The last defenders to see him were Tom Farmer and Eddie Saenz, over whom he hurdled as he went into the end zone.

Steve Lach and Tony Compagno chalked up the game's first two scores, putting Washington 14

Eagles Rout Giants, 41-24

New York, Nov. 9 (AP).—Boots Pritchard streaked through New York's defense for three touchdowns today as the Philadelphia Eagles smothered the winless Giants, 41-24, in full view of 29,016 National Football League customers at the Polo Grounds.

Only the forward passing of Paul Governali, who completed 18 of 35 heaves for 351 yards, kept the Giants in the ball game during the first half when they twice led.

Ken Strong, the Giant's old reliable, booted a 21-yard field goal at 5:20 of the first quarter but the lead didn't last long.

Van Buren Bulls Over

With Van Buren, the league-leading ground gainer, churning through the Giants' line the Eagles scored as Van Buren bulled over from the 14. Cliff Patton, who knocked five subsequent extra points, missed the first one and it was 6-3 at the end of the period.

The Giants ripped back again in the second period with Governali pitching to Vic Carroll on an 18-yard play that regained the lead and Strong's placement made 10-6.

Back came Philadelphia to march 60 yards after receiving the kickoff, Pat McHugh streaking across from the 17 on a brilliant cutback after a Thompson-Jack Ferrante pass had set it up.

Noble Doss' interception of a Governali third-period pass touched off another Philadelphia surge, climaxed by a brilliant 24-yard dash through the secondary by Pritchard at 4:31.

Nine minutes later Pritchard scored again, this time dashing 30 yards down the sidelines, after taking a 7-yard forward from Thompson.

George Franck's catch of Governali's 20-yard toss gave the Giants an early touchdown in the final session but the Eagles stormed back.

A beautiful 50-yard pass play from Thompson to Ferrante who ran 17 yards after catching the 33-yard pitch, made it 34-17 and Pritchard gathered in a 7-yard aerial from Macrides to end the winners' scoring.

Just before the final gun, Governali clicked with two long passes and Gordon Paschka cracked over from the 2.

DEAR FOLKS: At Pimlico. Gustave Ring of Washington has purchased two horses from Alfred Vanderbilt—Kitchen Police and Eagle Eye. Looks as though Pimlico is getting all the rough weather Laurel missed. This track has had only one fast oval since the meeting began and that has affected attendance and wagering. Joseph A. Farrell, president and general manager of Bowie and Marlboro, is at home in Baltimore after nine months in a hospital. Since his illness, Eddie O'Hara has headed the business of the two tracks. The $20,000-added Bryan and O'Hara Handicap at Bowie may bring a meeting of Gallorette and Double Jay. Pimlico closes Thursday and Bowie opens Friday. Charlie Feltner did okay by himself here last Friday, saddling three winners. He has come a long way since he was steward, starter and all-around official at the Berryville meetings. I'll be glad when the steeplechases are history for the year. One fell but nobody hurt last Saturday and that is news. The Maryland racing writers will hold their annual dinner at the Lord Baltimore Hotel Wednesday night with Art (WOL) Brown as master of ceremonies. See you on the rail. BILL.

Otto Graham Passes Two Touchdowns

Cleveland, Nov. 9 (AP).—Brooklyn's hapless Dodgers came within one point of engineering one of the major upsets of the pro football season today, bowing to the champion Cleveland Browns, 13 to 12, in a bruising All-America Football Conference game before 30,279.

Lou (The Toe) Groza's conversion after the first Cleveland touchdown provided the margin of victory and enabled the Browns to maintain a comfortable margin at the head of the loop's Western Division.

The Dodgers, one of the conference's favorite doormats, set the Browns back on their heels by moving 80 yards to a touchdown in eight plays after the opening kickoff.

Graham Clicks

Brilliant running by Monk Gafford, Bob (Hunchy) Hoernschemeyer and Mickey Colmer sparked the drive, with Colmer going over from the five. Phil Martinovich's placement attempt was blocked, marking his first conversion failure in 31 attempts.

The Browns recovered from this lightning stab, and on the second play after the kickoff Otto Graham hurled to Dante Lavelli for a 72-yard scoring play.

The Dodgers, who were "up" for this game, came back with another drive that fizzled out when a 43-yard field goal attempt by Martinovich was short.

The Browns widened their lead in the second period, going 80 yards for another tally with a 15-yard pass from Graham to Mayne climaxing the offensive. A bad pass from center spoiled Groza's conversion attempt.

Graham Sets Record

A 37-yard punt return by Gafford put the Dodgers on the Browns' 23 late in the second quarter, but then failed to gain in three tries and Martinovich's fourth-down field goal attempt from the 29 was wide.

Another 45-yard field goal try by Martinovich in the fourth period was short, but the Dodgers reached pay dirt in the final seven minutes when Gafford broke away for 79 yards and a touchdown. Martinovich missed the conversion attempt.

Graham, who tossed both Cleveland touchdowns, established a new conference record of 53 pass completions without an intereception for a total of 925 yards.

Yanks Ruin 49ers' Hopes By 24 to 16

New York, Nov. 9 (AP).—Spec Sanders herded the New York Yankees to a 24 to 16 triumph over the San Francisco 49ers today and virtually ended the Californians' hopes of taking the Western Division title in the All-America Football Conference.

For almost 52 minutes the 49ers had parlayed a fumble and two blocked punts into a 16-to-14 lead that was wiped out when Harvey Johnson, Yankee kicking speicalist, came off the bench to boot a 19-yard field goal.

That put the New Yorkers ahead in a game they had to win to keep ahead of the Buffalo Bills in the race for the Eastern crown.

A few plays later Jack Russell blocked a Frankie Albert punt which Bruce Alford recovered and lugged across for an unneeded touchdown.

But it was Sanders, the confedence's leading ground gainer, who thrilled the 37,342 paying customers. In all the former Texas University athlete added 437 yards to his personal total.

The Californians got away to a three point lead in the first period when Sanders fumbled Albert's punt after toting it back to his own 32-yard line. Three Albert passes and several line plays took the ball to the 8 from where Joe Vetrano split the uprights.

Two of Sanders' punts were blocked in the second quarter and each time the 49ers recovered the ball.

The first was converted into a touchdown on an 8-yard Albert pass to Ned Mathews and the second was registered on a flip also from the 8 from the same Albert to Alyn Beals.

The Yankees moved ahead for a few minutes at the start of the second when Sanders passed to Russell from 14 yards out. A 34-yard pass and run play, Sanders to Alford, gave the Yankees another immediately after the half and brought the New Yorkers up to 16 to 14 behind the Californians. Then came Harvey Johnson's kick and the insurance touchdown.

George (The Kid) Ratterman, voted the Bills' most popular player by the fans, celebrated the occasion by throwing his seventh scoring pass of the campaign for the opening touchdown, in the first quarter.

Ties Conference Mark

The 27-yard pitch to Alton Baldwin tied the conference record for touchdown passes, set last year by Otto Graham of the Cleveland Browns. Graham Armstrong's extra-point kick was low.

The Bills' alert defense paved the way for the next three scores, all of which were set up by pass interceptions. Felto Prewitt picked off Charley O'Rourke's flip early in the third period, returning 9 yards to the Dons' 31. Julie Rykovich and Lou Tomasetti drove to the 11 and Chet Mutryn cut over guard for the score. Ratterman's pass for the point failed.

Rykovich Runs 56 Yards

The locals racked up another touchdown less than three minutes later. Rykovich came up with another O'Rourke pass and dashed 56 yards to the Los Angeles 9, Mutryn going the last six yards for his second score. Vic Kulbitski plunged to convert.

Vince Mazza, Bills' end, raced 24 yards with another of O'Rourke's tosses in the final minute of play. George Terlep passed to Kulbitski for 16 yards and the final score. Armstrong's placekick with a soggy ball again failed.

Chance for Revenge

Bee Bee Faces Frank Lacey Tonight in Return Contest

Frank Lacey, Baltimore middleweight, who beat Bee Bee Washington in his home town several months ago, will collide with the Foggy Bottom fighter in a return battle tonight at Turner's Arena.

Despite Lacey's triumph, which was by a close margin, Washington's backers, knowing how well he fights in the Arena ring, are confident he will even the score.

Bee Bee, who started his drive to top recognition locally and who just two years ago was rated fifth among the Nation's middleweight contenders, seems to have the knack of being able to do his best in the the 14th Street ring, as evidenced by the fact that in almost three years of fighting there the Foggy Bottom battler is yet to taste defeat.

Lacey is handled by shrewd Heinie Blaustein, veteran Baltimore manager of such former champions as Joe and Vince Dundee and Harry Jeffra. The Baltimorean has won 39 out of 42, with two defeats and a draw with Cyclone Williams the only dents on his record. Washington beat the same Williams last year.

Gene Hardison of Norfolk and Melvin Wade of Baltimore will meet in a five-round semiwindup. Tony Longo of Norfolk and Hank (Pepper) Young of Washington clash in a five. Other bouts, the first at 8:45, show Elkins Brothers against Al Davis in a four and Charlie Marini against Lucky Stevens in a four.

Coolidge Tackles Undefeated Tech on Saturday

Colts Must Win to Stay In Running

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The Calvin Coolidge Colts, absent from the schoolboy football spotlight since they won the interhigh championship last year, return to the forefront Friday when they tackle the undefeated McKinley Tech Trainers at Central

Central	3	0	0	Eastern	3	3	0
Tech	5	0	0	Western	1	3	1
Coolidge	3	2	0	Wilson	1	5	0
Anacostia	3	2	1	Roosevelt	0	6	0

Stadium in the most important game of this week's 15-game schedule.

The Colts, doped during the preseason training campaign as outstanding contenders for their second straight championship, dropped their first two league games, but have since come back to win three straight shutouts.

Central, Tech Tied for First

The 3-2 record the Colts carry into the Tech game tabs them as the only remaining team besides Central and Tech, still in the running for a playoff berth. Central and Tech are tied for first with 5-0 records.

But the Colts must win Friday to stay in the running. Their chances hinge on a combination of two victories in their remaining two games and two losses for either Central or Tech. All have two games remaining on their slates.

The two other interhigh league games Friday pit Central against Western at Western, and Wilson against Eastern at Eastern.

Tech Plays Favorite Role

Tech, with an undefeated, untied and unscored upon record in interhigh play, goes into the Coolidge game as favorite. But the Colts, who slashed their way into last year's playoffs with a last ditch rally, and then went on to beat Tech for the championship, are not to be counted out. Central can clinch its playoff spot by beating Western.

Two of the three other District area unbeaten teams also see action this weekend. St. John's Cadets, conquerors of Central's Vikings last Friday before 10,000 fans, the largest crowd of the season, for the high schools, are favored over Anacostia at Anacostia. And Episcopal is favored over Gonzaga's Purple Eagles, who have been beaten four times, at Episcopal, on Saturday.

Bullis, victor in seven straight, is idle this week.

Terps Beat Georgetown, G. W. in Sail Regatta

University of Maryland's sailing team won a three-way regatta yesterday at Tidal Basin, scoring 177 points to 163 for George Washington and 145 for Georgetown.

High scorer for the regatta was Georgetown's Bob Grimmig, who netted 65. George Washington was the regatta host.

Steelers Win, 21 to 14; Tribe Halted on Two points behind with only half the second period gone. Lach's points came at the end of a 69-yard drive along the ground.

Compagno Goes Over

Three first downs were registered running before Lach made another on fourth down at the Redskin 1 and went over on the next play.

It was Cifers' freak punt which set up Pittsburgh's second score. All the way across the field he kicked from his own 29, the ball bouncing crazily straight down the left sideline and finally out on the Redskin 4.

After Baugh's return punt to his own 40 it took Pittsburgh three plays to score. The first, a pass from Clement to Jansante, went for 28 yards; the second was a 10-yard smash by Compagno to the 2, and the third made it 14-0, Compagno going over center.

Baugh Pegs Six-Pointer

Washington finally started moving, but only after the Steelers had set some sort of record for back pedaling.

A clipping penalty and Joe Tereshinski's tackle of Clement for a 15-yard loss, made it third down and 40 yards to go for the Steelers before Cifers kicked out and Saenz came back to Washington's 26.

Saenz' dash around end was good for 6 yards, Castiglia carried three times in a row for 15 yards, and Baugh decided the advance was too slow.

He stepped back, found Joe Duckworth on the 27 and hurled for a 26-yard gain.

The next play it was Taylor receiving, a second after he'd stepped into the end zone at the right corner. That was good for 24 yards and after Poillon kicked the first of his two extra points, it was 14-7 at halftime.

Washington's next threat started late in the third quarter on a sour note. Todd misjudged Cifers' kick, finally collected the ball and romped to the Redskins' 39.

A pass to Bob Nussbaumer and a few Castiglia smashes carried to the Steeler 35. But there Baugh was thrown for a 14-yard loss, recovered with two more tosses, for 7 and 27 yards, to Nussbaumer.

Baugh's sneak was good for 5 yards to the 10 and another Baugh-to-Nussbaumer aerial carried to the three before "the Bomber" stepped out.

Castiglia had four straight chances from there, finally spinning over from the two on fourth down.

There were 12½ minutes of play left, but the way the Steelers were playing it, Washington needed much more than that. Much more time and much more offense.

How They Scored:

FIRST PERIOD

STEELERS—Lach plunged over from the 1 after a 69-yard drive. Glamp converted. Steelers, 7-0.

SECOND PERIOD

STEELERS—Compagno went over from the 2 after a 40-yard march. Glamp converted. Steelers, 14-0.

REDSKINS—Taylor took a 24-yard pass from Baugh in the end zone. Poillon converted. Steelers, 14-7.

THIRD PERIOD

STEELERS—Clement went 17 yards through center for a touchdown. Glamp converted. Steelers, 21-7.

FOURTH PERIOD

REDSKINS—Castiglia went over on his fourth try from the 3-yard line. Poillon converted. Steelers, 21-14.

Baseball Draft Opens Today

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—Major league baseball club officials will meet here tomorrow morning for the annual draft of minor league players.

With 17, or possibly 18, club owners, officials or managers in attendance, the meeting had to be moved into larger quarters in a fourth-floor parlor of the Netherlands Plaza Hotel. Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler said last year's meeting in his small office proved overcrowded.

Chandler and Leslie M. O'Connor, general manager of the Chicago White Sox, who along with his club was recently suspended from baseball for refusal to pay a $500 fine levied for signing a high school player and then reinstated when the penance was paid, probably will meet face to face for the first time since their short-lived feud ended.

In drafting minor league prospects, the St. Louis Browns, last place club in the American League, will have first choice at the long list of players in the unrestricted draft class. The National League's Philadelphia Phillies get second selection rights.

Chandler said the drafting will continue until the 16 clubs have exhausted the list or refuse to make further selections. However, additional picks may be made by telegram to the commissioner's office until midnight, November 13.

Caps Cut Squad To Nine Players

Coach Red Auerbach last night announced that his Washington Capitols have reduced their squad to nine men while pointing for their 1947-48 Basketball Association of America opening against the Baltimore Bullets at Uline Arena Wednesday night.

Nick Shaback, veteran guard claimed by Washington when the Cleveland Rebels disbanded, has been given his release while Francis "Buddy" O'Grady, one of the Caps' seven "iron men" last season, has gone to the St. Louis Bombers on trial.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

NO SCHOOL TUESDAY!
Bring in the children to see Alice and let them look and listen to their heart's content

"Curiouser and curiouser" cries Alice ungrammatically, peeking excitedly as the magnificence of this Window Wonderland unfolds before her inquiring eyes! Such splendor . . . such a pageantry of color . . . such pretty tunes, and such fun that the children will talk about it for days . . . want to return again and again to see all the lovable, laughable fairyland people parade before their wide-open eyes. The funny caterpillar with his smoking hookah; the frowning Duchess with baby pig; the Cheshire cat that grins and grins; and oh just ever so many more of the dearly beloved characters that are so close to children's hearts and fond parents' memories. Minature floats circle 'round and 'round happy Alice. Each float depicts a portion of the Alice in Wonderland tale. Listen to the story as it is clearly told over the loud speaker. See it TODAY and you'll want to see it again and again from now until Christmas!

See all these floats . . .

Loyalty Board May Issue List Of Red Fronts

By Jerry Kluttz

These are among the problems to be faced by the 20-man Loyalty Review Board when it meets here Friday for the first time:

Kluttz

1. Whether to make public the list of subversive organizations which has been prepared by the Attorney General. The list will be turned over to the board on Friday. The three Civil Service Commissioners will recommend that it be made public immediately.

2. To decide whether an agency should suspend an accused employe without pay from his job on mere suspicion of disloyalty, or whether the agency must wait to take action, if any, against him when his case is finally disposed of. An accused employe who is later cleared by the board would suffer financially if immediately suspended without pay by his agency.

3. To decide how long both the agency and the employe will have to appeal their cases, and,

4. To work out a close relationship between the FBI and the Civil Service investigative staffs so as to secure all possible information on cases before decisions are made. Also, to decide how much of the information will be given to the accused employes.

The board chairman is Seth W. Richardson, a prominent local attorney. The board will hear and make recommendations on cases of disloyalty appealed to it by both the employes and the agencies.

The President, it was learned, will soon meet with the 20 members to tell them what he hopes to accomplish by his order which provides for a loyalty check of each Federal worker and incoming employe.

AEC: Paul Gaughran is the employe member of the efficiency rating board at Atomic Energy Commission. His alternate is Margaret Williamson . . . A. R. "Mac" Hilliard has joined the AEC information staff. He's a former War Production Board employe.

HOLIDAY: Don't forget that tomorrow, Armistice Day, is a holiday for Federal workers. You must be paid double time for that day if you're ordered to work.

PEOPLE: N. Patrick Beville, a World War II veteran, is the new assistant manager of Veterans Administration's regional office here. He has been in the Richmond branch office . . . Michael Lee is the new chief of Commerce's Far Eastern Division. He succeeds Charles K. Moser, who recently retired . . . Forrest McCluney has revived the State Department Recreational Association in a big way. The association has about 2500 paid-up members.

CIVIL SERVICE has announced exams for tobacco inspector to pay from $2168 to $4149 to start, and physical therapist, $2644 to $5905 to start . . . MARITIME: The staff of the Senate Armed Forces Committee is checking up on the condition of Maritime's reserve fleet . . . NAVY: Employes in its Office of Naval Research who fail to call in sick before 10 a. m. will be charged with either annual or leave without pay.

AGRICULTURE will excuse its employes here at 2:15 p. m. Wednesday to attend an honor ceremony on the Washington Monument Grounds. Awards will be given employes for distinguished and superior services. Length-of-service awards will go to its employes who have had 40 or more years in Government. Pay increases for superior accomplishments have been ordered for these employes:

Roscoe Dalton and Patrick J. Kinley, meat inspectors in Bureau of Animal Industry; Mary A. Vinall, a clerk in Commodity Exchange Authority; Ralph T. Ohman, a Forest Service administrative assistant, and these other Forest Service employes: Ole B. Lien, a forest lookout; Lloyd G. Gilmor, a district assistant; James P. Langdon, forest ranger; Porter C. Burris, a mechanic; B. H. Fraser, district assistant; Joseph O. Bridges, ecologist, and Horace E. Hedges, a forester.

Also, A. F. Schimmack, a Production and Marketing accountant; Walter C. Wheeler, a P&MA grain inspector; Wilbur M. Hurst, an agricultural engineer; William V. Hukill, another engineer, and these Soil Conservation Service employes:

Charles H. Grey, a clerk; Weldon G. Perrin, soil scientist; Elbridge Bacon, soil conservationist, and Lockwood Forsyth, another soil conservationist.

PROGRESS: The staff of the Senate Civil Service Committee will map out a Federal worker legislative program based on the recommendations of Government employe leaders. George Riley, the hard-working staff director, will meet with union and veteran representatives within a few days to whip the program into shape. He will make a report on the program to Chairman Langer who will also meet with employe leaders when he returns here next week.

The program is certain to call for raises, enactment of the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson retirement bill, a more liberal expense allowance for employes who must travel on official business, and opposition to any plan to either reduce or merge annual and sick leave.

Overhauling Of Arlington Vote System Is Demanded

Machinery Called Antiquated to Be Discussed Tonight By Electoral Board

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

Arlington residents of every political shade are calling for reform of what they call the county's antiquated and creaking election machinery.

The demand has come from the Arlington Better Government League, the Greater Arlington Association, and from such sources as the League of Women Voters and the Democratic Party.

Concerned about defects in the system, the county electoral board will meet tonight to discuss means of improvement. Secretary John W. Jackson said the three-member group would welcome suggestions.

Slow Election Returns

The general complaint was underscored in the county election last Tuesday, when nearly 13,000 voters filed through the 11 Arlington precincts to pick 15 candidates for local and State offices.

Polls closed at 6 p. m. on Tuesday. At 1:30 a. m. Thursday—more than 31 hours later—the last precinct, Clarendon No. 1, had just finished its tally.

Ballston Precinct took nearly 24 hours to count its 2196 votes; Arlington Precinct spent 18½ hours counting 2505. The first precinct to finish, Glencarlyn, completed tallying its 358 votes at 2:30 a. m. Wednesday—more than four hours after its finishing time in previous elections.

Fast Work in Baltimore

In contrast is the voting machine system in Baltimore. In the 1942 gubernatorial race, when a vote of 377,692 was cast by 6 p. m., a local newspaper was able to forecast a trend at 6:30 o'clock, 80 per cent of the vote had been tabulated by 8 o'clock and unoffical results for the entire election were available by 10 o'clock—a span of four hours.

Arlington voters and citizens' groups blame the election machinery, not election officials. They say that:

1. A complete redistricting of most county voting precincts is badly needed.

2. Top-heavy, over-long lists of candidates need to be hacked down.

3. Arlington's ballot-counting technique dates back "practically to Indian times."

The most recent change in Arlington County precinct lines was made 20 years ago, when Lyon Park precinct was created. Since that time, county population has zoomed from 12,829 (1930 census figures) to 130,000 persons, population groups have shifted, yet no change has been made in political boundaries.

Arlington precinct, for example, now includes the Arlington Village, Barcroft, and Fairlington apartment developments, in addition to a large number of homes.

Splitting Advocated

Claude O. Thomas, who preceded Jackson as secretary of the electoral board, has expressed the belief that population-heavy Arlington and Ballston precincts "should each be split into four separate precincts."

As recently as last winter, one attempt was made to dovetail political boundaries with population shifts.

A redistricting committee, appointed after the November, 1946, elections, recommended the division of both Arlington and Ballston into several precincts, asked for adjustment of other boundaries. But redistricting action was postponed until after the election just past.

Loudest cry for a shortened ballot has come from Arlington's Better Government League, which is urging the Virginia General Assembly to authorize nonpartisan final ballot and shorten the time needed to tally returns.

40 Names on Ballot

Voters last Tuesday faced a ballot marked with names of 40 candidates, including 12 for the five school board seats and nine for two county board posts.

Under the present system of counting votes, one election official reads the results of each ballot while three others keep the tally on separate sheets. After each ballot is read, it is "threaded," or strung on a line like a catch of fish.

Votes on the individual tally sheets are computed separately, without adding machines, and compared.

Mrs. Monica Flaherty, head judge at Virginia Highlands Precinct, said: "I wish they'd get voting machines. The system we use dates back practically to Indian times."

3 Teen-Agers Held In Eight Robberies

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 9 (AP).—Three teen-agers were in the hands of West Virginia State police today, charged with robbing a service station, a lunch room and a business office in Hagerstown, Md., as wel las five places here and in Inwood.

Their loot consisted mostly of automobile horns, cigarettes and hot dogs. The boys, all local residents, are in the Berkeley County jail awaiting a hearing next week, said Corpl. W. W. Murphy.

Watching 'Defense' of the Capital From 'Bomb Attack'

The Washington Post

BLINDING PERFORMANCE—Thousands gathered on the Monument grounds to watch the National Guard's 113 Fighter Group put up a mock defense of the Capital against a group of attacking bombers. The blinding sun in a cloudless sky made observation a little difficult at times as 32 P-47s intercepted the 20 A-26 bombers the city with the fighters intercepting them.

Lieut. John Scott, former Eighth and Ninth Air Force pilot who described the operation for the spectators, explained that in an actual attack, the interception would have been made miles away from Washington.

The intercepting 113th Fighter Group, commanded by Col. Laidler B. Mackall, is made up of three squadrons, the 149th of Richmond, the 104th of Baltimore, and the 121st of Washington.

The demonstration was staged in connection with the National Guard's current three-month recruiting campaign. After the aerial show, spectators were invited to view the mobile radar units of the 260th lined up on the grounds.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the D. C. National Guard, said in a brief talk that the District now has 709 guardsmen, about a quarter of the number needed for the defense of this city. He urged those present to strengthen the local units, whose prime purpose, he pointed out, "is to defend you."

Arlington Nurses' Aide Corps Will Be Reactivated

W. W. McCollum, chairman of the Arlington County Chapter, American Red Cross announced yesterday that the chapter's nurses' aid corps will be reactivated immediately at the request of Fort Myer Hospital authorities. The corps has been on inactive status, on call only in an emergency or for disaster relief.

Col. William L. Thompson, commanding officer of the hospital at Fort Myer, said facilities there were being expanded to care for additional hospital and clinic patients. This will, in turn, call for a corresponding increase in the size of the nursing staff.

Maj. Grace E. McCully, Army Nurse Corps, in charge of nurses at the Fort Myer Hospital, has explained that with many Army nurses still leaving the service, a substantial number of Red Cross nurses' aides will be needed to work at the hospital on a regular schedule. Efforts will be made to recruit women of Arlington who have had training.

Beckley, W. Va., Nov. 9 (AP).—Police were holding a negro today for questioning in connection with the slaying of a 50-year-old Beckley businessman and the blonde, 39-year-old wife of a dentist.

The bodies of Mrs. Nellie Mae Rand, wife of Dr. Kenneth K. Rand, and E. Ray Bailey were found on a lonely Raleigh County road Wednesday. Both had been shot through the head.

Wasson, associate secretary of the Board of Missions and Church Extension, will speak at the meeting in the Trinity Methodist Church.

Ex-Marine Recalls '74 Hitch On Corps' 172d Anniversary

The Washington Post

MARINE OLDTIMER—William I. White, 87, on the occasion of the 172d anniversary of the Marine Corps today, recalls the days when he enlisted at 14 as a "boy bound to learn music" in 1874, and was discharged six years later as a "Fifer of Marines."

The corps life was rugged in those days, too

Once a Marine, always a Marine—and a Brentwood, Md., man who served in the days of wooden ships and iron men is no exception.

Commenting on the 172d anniversary of the Marine Corps today, William I. White, 87, said last night, "You can't beat 'em, they're getting better every day."

White was enlisted in 1874, when 14 years old, as "a boy bound to learn music," and discharged as "a Fifer of Marines" six years later.

Life in the corps was rugged in the days when he rounded the Horn on a full rigged ship, and "we had one Gatling gun and hardly anything else. There was nothing much to eat, and very little to do."

As for his conduct, he cheerfully says he "never spent a day in the brig," and his discharge certificate describes his character as "excellent."

There wese 20 privates, four noncommissioned officers and one officer in the Marine detail aboard the ship. In the entire corps in those post Civil War days there were only about 300 or 400 men, he says.

"The uniform wasn't much, either: Light blue trousers with a red stripe, dark blue blouse, and high round cap with visor."

white head is still erect, was born in Gloucester City, Camden County, N. J., "where boys went to work in the cotton mills at 8 years old."

Following his discharge, received at Portsmouth, Va., just as the ship was weighing anchor for Boston, he went to Martinsburg, W. Va., to learn boilermaking. It affected his hearing, so he came to Washington and found employment with the District Street Surfacing Department. He retired 43 years later as a foreman.

One thing he learned aboard ship was to sew, and he sewed all the baby clothes for the daughter with whom he lives, Mrs. William A. Hepburn, of 3903 Utah ave. Her husband was superintendent of Brentwood police from 1937 until his death in 1943.

"You would know he had been in the Marine Corps if you could see his bedroom," she says, "the way he keeps his bureau drawers and makes his bed!" Once a marine, always a marine.

Parents Blamed For Delinquency

Winchester, Va., Nov. 9 (Spl.).—E. P. Browning, assistant superintendent of city schools, called for education of parents as a solution to juvenile delinquency in an address before the Winchester Rotary Club.

Many parents are "too anxious to shift responsibility and are too interested in dances and bridge parties to show proper concern for their children," he said. "If juvenile delinquency is to be stamped out, we must get at the source, and the source quite often is the parents. Parents must be instructed as to what their obligations are."

Laurel Shop Looted; $8000 Stock Taken

Fast-Working Gang Cleans Out Store, Carts Away Dresses

Fast-working thieves ransacked the Vogue Dress Shop at Laurel, Md., during Saturday night and escaped with clothing and jewelry valued at about $8000, Laurel police reported yesterday.

The theft was discovered about 10 a. m. yesterday by Mrs. Eva M. McKnight of Laurel, who operates the business with her husband, Thomas McKnight, when she went to the store with two carpenters who had been engaged to make repairs. She reported the store was virtually cleaned out.

According to Town Policeman J. W. Lonas, who said the job apparently was done by a "big-time" hijacking gang, the thieves gained entrance by forcing a heavily-reinforced back door with a crowbar. He thought at least four or five men robbed the store and hauled the loot away in a truck.

Lonas said the gang obviously operated quickly, because a police cruiser passed the shop at least 12 times during the night, and its occupants had seen nothing amiss.

A few fingerprints were found, otherwise the thieves left no clews. The fingerprints are being checked by Maryland State Police.

Listed among the loot, after an inventory by the owners, were 125 dresses, 78 women's suits, 12 blouses, 12 bed jackets, 50 snow suits, 15 winter coats, 15 evening gowns, 25 raincoats, 50 pairs of earrings, 12 strings of pearls and five rhinestone necklaces.

According to Mrs. McKnight, the shop was not insured against theft.

$140,969.50 Given World YW Program

The national YWCA's world-wide service program yesterday was enriched by $140,969.50—presented at ceremonies at the Washington Cathedral.

Eighty girls representing 48 States, Canada and Alaska, and 30 foreign lands, marched in a colorful procession and presented the gifts in behalf of branch Ys in this country and Hawaii.

Dr. J. Douglas Horton, chairman of the World Council of Churches' American Committee, preached at the service—marking the fiftieth anniversary of the YWCA's "World Fellowship" and "Week of Prayer" projects. Members of the local and national YWCA boards and of the diplomatic corps attended.

Other Church Events

Meanwhile, a number of other church events of interest took place yesterday.

Dr. Leander M. Zimmerman, pastor-emeritus of Baltimore's Christ Lutheran Church, and noted composer of spiritual verse, laid the cornerstone of the $270,000 addition to the National Lutheran Home for the Aged, 18th and Douglas sts. ne.

Dr. Zimmerman

Dedicated at the same time was the Weidley Memorial Residence, which will house the staff of the Home, led by Dr. Robert Lang. Dr. Zimmerman helped found the Home over 50 years ago and in 1925 and 1926, personally helped to raise $60,000 toward the building fund. The sermon was preached by the Rev. J. Frank Fife, president of the Maryland Synod, comprising United Lutheran churches in the District and Maryland.

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, celebrated a solemn pontifical mass of thanksgiving at the silver anniversary service of Holy Redeemer Catholic Church, a Negro congregation supervised by the Josephite Fathers. The Rev. Patrick J. O'Connor, assistant professor of sacred eloquence at Catholic University, preached. The church is at 210 New York ave. nw.

Church is Consecrated

Bishop Charles Wesley Flint, of the Washington Methodist area, consecrated the Marvin Memorial Methodist Church at Four Corners, Md., assisted by Dr. Fred C. Reynolds, superintendent of the Washington East Methodist District, and the Rev. Marion S. Michael, pastor. Numerous gifts were dedicated as memorials. During the afternoon ceremonies, Michael received the keys of the new edifice from Isam Mason, president of the church's board of trustees. Dr. Reynolds, former high-ranking Army chaplain, addressed morning services.

Members of Takoma Lutheran Church, now worshiping at 7th and Dahlia sts. nw., launched a $200,000 financial campaign for a proposed new edifice to be built next year at 12th st. and Eastern ave. nw. The Rev. Charles Riley of New York City spoke, and the Rev. J. Adrian Pfeiffer, pastor, presided.

U. S. Military Governor Farewell Party Honors

By Marie McNair

Murray D. Van Wagoner, former Governor of Michigan and recently named Military Director of Bavaria, took off from Washington last night with Mrs. Van Wagoner for Boston to fly from there to Germany.

Before they left Mr. Van Wagoner's sister, Mrs. Esther Van Wagoner Tufty, entertained at a farewell cocktail party at the Statler late yesterday afternoon, asking old and new friends in to wish the travelers Godspeed on their journey overseas.

The Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Kenneth Royal were there, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, handsome in black with stiff lace on her brimmed hat, found her longtime friend, Mrs. Charles Rollins, and dropped into the vacant chair beside her for a chat.

The Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Van Kleffans came in and were soon the center of a conversational circle; Mrs. Homer Ferguson, her black costume accented with pearls, was waiting for the Senator to join her.

Steelmans Stop In

Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Kennedy were being congratulated on their very successful cocktail party on Saturday for the Van Wagoners who have been staying with them on their visit to Washington. Representative and Mrs. Roy Woodruff lingered awhile and John Steelman, Presidential Assistant, and Mrs. Steelman, another lovely lady all in black, came in to say "hello" before going on to dinner.

Mrs. Jacques Mero of Chicago wore a ballet length gown of black lace over gold lame; Mrs. Maurice Robinson of Detroit, looked like a portrait in a full ankle length skirt of stiff brown taffeta and an ivory and gold brocade blouse. Mrs. Tufty's gown was floor length of black crepe with inserts of marquisette beaded in silver; Mrs. Van Wagoner wore black, too, glistening with sequins, and Mrs. Albert Dear, jr., of Jersey City, who with her husband also welcomed guests, wore pale blue faille.

Bill Draper, Undersecretary of the Army, phoned at the last minute to say he was taking a plane to Detroit to make a speech; Mrs. Leslie Biffle told me she's been in and out of town most of the fall; Gen. and Mrs. Ralph Tate who live in Rockville Center, Long Island, now, were catching up on news of their Washington friends.

Then there were the Delegate from Hawaii and Mrs. Joseph Farrington, the Australian Minister, Dr. Ludwig Kleinwaechter; Charles Campbell of the British Information Service, and Mrs. Campbell; Mr. and Mrs. Norman Littell and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Edwards and their daughter, Miss India Moffett Edwards.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Comes Home From the Army to Find Wife In Love With Somebody Else, so She Thinks; The Crisis Fades, but New Storm Clouds Rise

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We had been married five years when my husband was inducted into the Army in 1942. We weren't getting on too well at the time. When he returned in 1945, after 27 months' combat service, he found me in pretty much of a mix-up.

I imagined myself in love with another married man. After quite a bit of trouble, which very nearly ended in disaster, things straightened out. I came to my senses, thank God, and realized I was in love with my husband—that the other man was just someone to lean on while alone.

We've retained our friendship with the other couple because my husband, although admitting jealousy, says he wants to be friends with them, as we do have fun together. I have done my utmost to prove my sincerity.

Wife Is Insulted By Man's Anxiety

I RESIGNED a position I held for six years,—to stay home and meet him at the door every night with a smile and a kiss. I have kept myself attractive and the table loaded with his favorite foods. And I have given him a baby daughter,—which I wouldn't have done, I assure you, if there had been any doubt of my feelings.

We were getting along wonderfully until just recently, when quite by accident I learned that my husband asked the other man never to visit our house unless he is present. This cuts me to the quick—as other friends drop in and he thinks nothing of it.

He told the man we were getting along fine and he didn't want the neighbors to start talking. That isn't the reason. He knows how the neighbors are: they talk, regardless. His jealousy, his lack of faith in me, are responsible for this.

He has a strange way of showing his love. I think he did an unforgivable thing. Don't you agree that he went too far? I haven't been able to treat him right since.
D. C.

Woman Is Greatly Deceived by Herself

DEAR D. C.: You are telling the truth as you see it, I suppose, but you are much deceived by yourself.

As I get the picture, you didn't in the least come to your senses and realize that you were in love with your husband; but rather fell back on him with compulsive fervor and clinging dependency when it became apparent that you couldn't take the other man from his wife.

During that period when things "very nearly ended in disaster," you had a panicky sensation of falling between two stools, of losing out all around,—with both men repudiating you, the one expediently, the other in outrage.

Almost out of your mind with anxiety, confusion, desire for security and desire to save face, you finally won your husband to a reconciliation program; and in desperate ugency to seal the bargain and make it stick, you did all in your power—overtly—to please and reassure him.

On the surface, a seemingly good relationship was contrived. Not looking too closely, not feeling too sensitively, one might not detect the worm at the core, namely: your persistent undertow of amative interest in the other man, to which he doubtless responds by implication.

She Feels Guilty, Angry, Frustrated

THIS cloudy business, vaguely sensed by your husband, has roused his anxiety and prompted his blunt words of caution to the man,—a not-so-strange way of showing his love for his wife.

Your intense resentment of his plain dealing—doubtless relayed to you by the man; who else?—means that you are upset at having your hand called indirectly; defensive in proportion as you are guilty, at least figuratively, of disloyalty; and frigidly angry with your husband for shutting the door on a tacit flirtation that, from your subconscious slant, gave most fillip to your days.

In all probability you've fostered the idea of retaining friendship with the other pair, whitewashing your motives even to yourself,—and my advice is to take the initiative in ruling them out of your life for obvious reasons, if you want to give your marriage an honest chance, and your husband a real contribution to peace of mind.

Tuesday's Peace Plate

Tomorrow, because this is the day we remember to do without meat, the Consumer Service Section, Citizens Food Committee, offers a cheese fondue that promises to melt in your mouth. The menu:

Chilled Fruit Juice
Cheese Fondue Buttered green cabbage
Squares of gingerbread

CHEESE FONDUE

2¼ cups milk
2 cups coarse bread crumbs
1½ cups grated American cheese
½ teaspoon salt
Dash cayenne pepper
4 eggs, separated

Scald milk and let cool. Then add crumbs, grated cheese, salt, and cayenne. Slowly stir in the beaten egg yolks. Then fold in the egg whites, beaten until stiff but not dry. Pour into a greased 2-quart casserole. Set in pan of warm water and bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) 1½ hours or until the fondue is set, and is a delicate brown. Serve at once. Serves 6 to 8. To serve 3 or 4, use half the recipe.

Round 6—Mr. and Mrs. Reducing Bout

It's Fun to Eat and Grow Thin Too

IN a way, life is like a reducing diet . . . the things we lack are often more vivid than the things we have. But that's no way to get fun out of living, or dieting either.

Of course that word "diet" is irritating. It's so negative and brings to mind grapefruit without sugar, and an unappetizing vegetable plate with a watery, poached egg. But the past week's menus haven't imposed much hardship. Actually a diet is normal eating, with calories restricted in the fattening foods. It's good eating—even if there is a little less of it.

In life, they say, it's the little things that count. So it is with reducing. One is salt. Many overweights sprinkle salt generously over everything. Excess salt contributes to water retention . . . you get waterlogged. About water—it's not fattening except when too much taken with meals leads to overeating. Don't freshen the taste buds by sipping ice water with meals, or stretch your food capacity by gulping down 2 or 3 glasses of water with a meal. Drink all the water you want between meals; 8 glasses are needed daily.

To keep a gay attitude toward this whole problem of getting down to normal, juggle the calories so as to include some of the foods you like. If black coffee at breakfast makes you want to snap at your husband, add cream and sugar. Delete calories somewhere else. Of course if you have three cups of coffee a day, that amount of cream and sugar adds up.

The chief difference in the calorie count in our daily double series is in little things—French dressing, butter, cream. Trimmings on the meal round out the figure. The big restriction is in desserts, and that puts you to the test. Not that you dislike fruit, but you'd rather have it between two crusts of pie.

One wonderful thing about reducing, however, is that it does get easier as you go along; and you're surprised to find you can lose weight without going hungry, or losing your bounce. So, on with calorie clipping!

Airing the Blankets

Blankets should be put out on the line occasionally and let the air blow through them. It means a fresher bed. However, take the trouble to do it right and don't let them drip out of the bedroom window for all the world to view and at the same time running the chance of accumulating dust and soil from the window ledge.

Your Questions On Homemaking

I washed some white curtains for the first time and they became streaked with yellow stains. The material is a fine mesh, I think either cotton, or coton mixed with another fiber. First, I soaked it overnight with very good quality soap flakes. The next day, I washed it in another solution of the same flakes, adding a little chlorine bleach. There are tiny holes in it now where threads seem to have disintegrated. Can you tell me how to remove the yellow streaks? What is the best way to wash such curtains? S. W.

Chlorine bleach is injurious to silk and wool and sometimes to rayon. It seems likely that it's action on another fiber used with cotton in making your curtain material has caused the yellowing and deterioration of the threads. A safe, mild bleach to use on white rayon, silk, or wool is a combination of 1 teaspoon sodium perborate to 1 pint hydrogen peroxide. It may be helpful in lightening the yellow streaks. Washing in lukewarm water with mild soapflakes should be the proper laundering procedure with these curtains. You might blue them to make them look whiter. Drying in the shade would be safest.

How can I remove black suede shoe polish from a rose-colored dress. I can't dye the dress because it has velvet down the front. M. B.

Sponging with denatured alcohol will often take out stains made by liquid shoe dressings. However, it may be injurious to certain rayon materials and it may affect colors. Try it out first on an inside seam of your dress. Diluting the alcohol with water will make it less likely to damage fabric and color.

Land Drainage Studied in 6 Va. Counties

Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 9 (AP).—The problem of draining southeastern Virginia farm lands that are undermined by quicksand is under investigation by Federal Soil Conservation Service personnel working in cooperation with the Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station.

Drainage Engineer C. M. Jones and Soil Scientist R. E. Devereaux, both of the conservation service, reported that proper drainage was handicapped by large areas of quicksand land in Greenesville, Sussex, Southampton, Nansemond, Isle of Wight, and Surrey Counties.

Researches reported that dry year crops of peanuts indicate drainage of wet land would increase yields from 10 to 20 bags an acre. Corresponding increases can be expected from corn and soybeans, they said.

Phelps Walker, conservation service drainage engineer here, said the affected lands were of fine or very fine sandy loams to a depth of 30 to 36 inches, below which is sand that is saturated with water a good part of the year when the water table is high.

Open ditches extending over the sand cave badly, and give little or no drainage, while shallow ditches must be placed so close together they are a hindrance to cultivation, Walker said.

The experiment station and the conservation service together are attempting to determine the stability of tile placed in these soils, the best tile depth and spacing, and what drainage methods and attachments to ditching machinery will facilitate tile laying.

'Right to Work' Law to Be Tested

Richmond, Va., Nov. 9 (AP).—What may be the first test of Virginia's "right to work" law, which forbids employers to require their employes to belong to a labor union, has been filed in the Elizabeth City County Circuit Court.

The plaintiff in the action is Harley A. Hawkins, a printing pressman, who has filed notice of a motion for judgment for $350 damages against the Brickey Print Shop.

His attorney staid today the motion for a judgment for damages was based on the dismissal of Hawkins by the printing concern for his refusal to join a labor union. The claimed damages are the equivalent of his alleged loss of pay and benefits.

GREAT OAKS
AN IMPOSING ESTATE

Only 12 Minutes from D. C. in Arlington

This mellow stone home of spaciousness and grandeur is built upon a high knoll surrounded by age-old oaks and commands a panoramic view of the 23 landscaped acres which comprise the grounds. Colonial in detail and design, built by the owners just prior to the war with the idea of perfection, the home embodies the finest in construction, unexcelled appointments, acme in planning and is a picture of elegance, grace and dignity.
The spring-fed swimming pool covers a quarter-acre and the other buildings on the property include a tenant house, two-story barn, 3-box stall building with rubdown overhang and an artistic stone spring house. The grounds are fenced and a hard-surfaced road leads from the entrance gates to the house and garages. The main entrance to the home leads into a spacious center-entrance reception hall where a gorgeous spiral staircase makes its way to the second floor. The living room is 22 by 15 with oversize fireplace and Colonial mantel, a large picture window which looks over green pastures and a French door leading onto a roomy screened veranda. The dining room is 12 by 15 with attractive bay window, built-in corner cabinets, chair rail and unusual cornice. The kitchen is all one could desire—electrically equipped, including Hotpoint dishwasher. Also on the first floor is a beautiful panelled library with corner fireplace, two spacious bedrooms and attractively tiled bath with shower.
On the second floor is a handsome master bedroom, 15 by 22, with tiled bath; fireplace with Colonial mantel and spacious twin closets. Also a tiled bath with entrance from the wide hall for two additional bedrooms, 12 by 16 and 11 by 12; a lovely storage room and a sun deck.
The basement is completely finished with plastered walls and tile floor, and contains a recreation room, 15 by 22, with massive stone fireplace, maid's room with private bath, laundry room with bath and Bendix facilities, and Deep Freeze furnace room with Quiet May heating equipment and double garage.
If desired the home and outbuildings can be purchased with eight acres.

Contestant Thinks Chances of Winning Are Slim

Capt. Douglas B. Netherwood of 1607 31st st. nw. takes a dim view of his chances of ever winning a Washington Post football contest.

He's undismayed by the realization that it would take more than three billion entries to cover every possible combination of victories, losses and ties.

That doesn't bother him; he says it would almost be worthwhile to buy that many copies of the paper to have the satisfaction of winning. But he adds:

"Then I'd undoubtedly find that some joker who submitted one entry also had them all correct — and had outguessed me on the probable score of the game at the bottom."

SWEET SIXTEENS

The St. Paul's players are trying to contact all former members of the group, to invite them to an annual Communion Breakfast to be held at 10 a. m. Sunday.

Full details may be obtained by contacting Gwen Tise of 1616 16th st. nw. Appropriately enough, Gwen's telephone number is Decatur 1600.

WHERE'S DIOGENES?

Jesse B. Manbeck of 1 Scott Circle ate at the Allies' Inn cafeteria, 1703 New York ave. nw., on October 22.

He remembered having two $5 bills when he entered, and he remembered breaking one of the bills to pay his check.

But the only way he could account for the disappearance of the other finif was the supposition that he had dropped it while he was settling the chit.

During the latter part of last week, Jesse went back to the same cafeteria for another meal, and got to kidding with the cashier.

"I really shouldn't eat here," he said. "It cost me $5 too much last time I was here."

"You mean you lost $5?" asked the cashier.

"Yes—why?"

From one of the rear compartments of her register the girl brought forth an envelope, which she handed to the surprised Manbeck. Inside was a $5 bill.

"One of our customers found this on the floor and turned it in," she explained. "We've been waiting for weeks for somebody to ask about it."

CHILD'S VERSION

Dr. J. M. Ray, head of the Politics and Government department at the University of Maryland, has a daughter named Sally.

Sally is 4 years old, and extremely active. Like most children her age, she's forever barking her shins and skinning her knees—and thereby hangs our tale.

SALLY

Uncle J. M. MacDonald of 2404 20th st. nw. tells us that when Sally sits on her front porch and sings to her dolly, the song goes like this:

Oh, Suzy Anne,
Don't you cry for me;
'Cause I'm goin' to Alabama with
My band-aid on my knee.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three healthy little kittens." (Oliver 7812).

HE IS ME

Corinne R. Manning submits this one for our Silly Rhyme Dept.:

TO WEGGIE

I am a District Liner,
I'm happy as can be.
You'll never be a whiner
While you string along with he.

"IT'S AN ILL WIND . . . "

Daniel R. Puma of 832 Rittenhouse st. nw. observes cheerfully that if Caesar Petrillo goes through with his threat to stop the production of records, maybe the move will result in fewer disk jockeys.

ADD SIGNS

Charles Stofberg, Commissioner Russ Young's Man Monday Tuesday Wednesday Thursday and Friday, says that on a trip through Pennsylvania some time back he saw this sign in a tavern:

"If you MUST drive your husband to drink, head him this way."

UNINTENDED HUMOR

E. Schwartz of 770 Princeton pl. nw. has been compiling a list of double features shown at local movie houses recently. Included are:

"The Trouble With Women," "Great Expectations."

"The Hucksters," "Shoot to Kill."

"Vacation Days," "Wolf Call."

"Ecstasy," "Kilroy Was Here."

New York. — The Steuben glassware which President Truman presented to Princess Elizabeth and her bridegroom-to-be doesn't compare, of course, with the lavish gifts from the other governments. But that's because the glassware was paid for by Truman. The gifts from the heads of other governments are paid for by those governments. The fact that our Federal budget makes no provision for such gifts sometimes has led to embarrassment. Josef Israels II tells of Haile Selassie's coronation, when the French government sent 100 cases of the finest wines and liqueurs, the British government sent a set of precious Doulton ware, the Italian government sent an Isotta-Fraschini armored car—and the U. S. A. sent an autographed photo of Herbert Hoover. The American envoy, Murray Jacoby, bought a silver frame for the photo from his own funds, so the gift would have some intrinsic value.

The Foreign Press Association, which selected Albert Einstein to receive its award for an "outstanding contribution to international understanding," made its selection by polling members and prominent citizens. The association, however, eliminated all candidates who are politically controversial!

The spice industry is facing a shortage of canary seeds because the seeds—grown in Morocco—are being shipped to France for human consumption. . . . The Hollywood actors, writers and executives who flew to Washington to protest against the methods of the House Un-American Activities Committee, paid for all expenses, including plane fare.

The bruises on Geoffrey Hellman's forehead came from his pounding in anguish when he discovered that his humorous book, "How to Disappear for an Hour," had been placed by Scribner's book store in its psychology and psychiatry book department.

It happened in one of America's largest gambling rooms. The dice shooter bet $250. Before Sam Rosoff could cover the bet, another player said: "I got $2 of it.' Rosoff covered the remaining $248 . . . The shooter made his point, then said, "Shoot $500." The other man said: "I got $4 of it." Rosoff glared at him, and covered the remaining $496. Again the player made his point, and said: "Shoot the thousand" . . . Again the other man said: "I got $8 of it" . . . Rosoff, about to place $992 on the table, took the man aside and asked: "How much did you expect to win tonight?" . . . "About $50," he said . . . "Here's the $50. Now scram," said Rosoff . . . "Oh, no," the man told him. "I don't bet as high as you do, but I get the same kick, gambling. I got $8 of the bet."

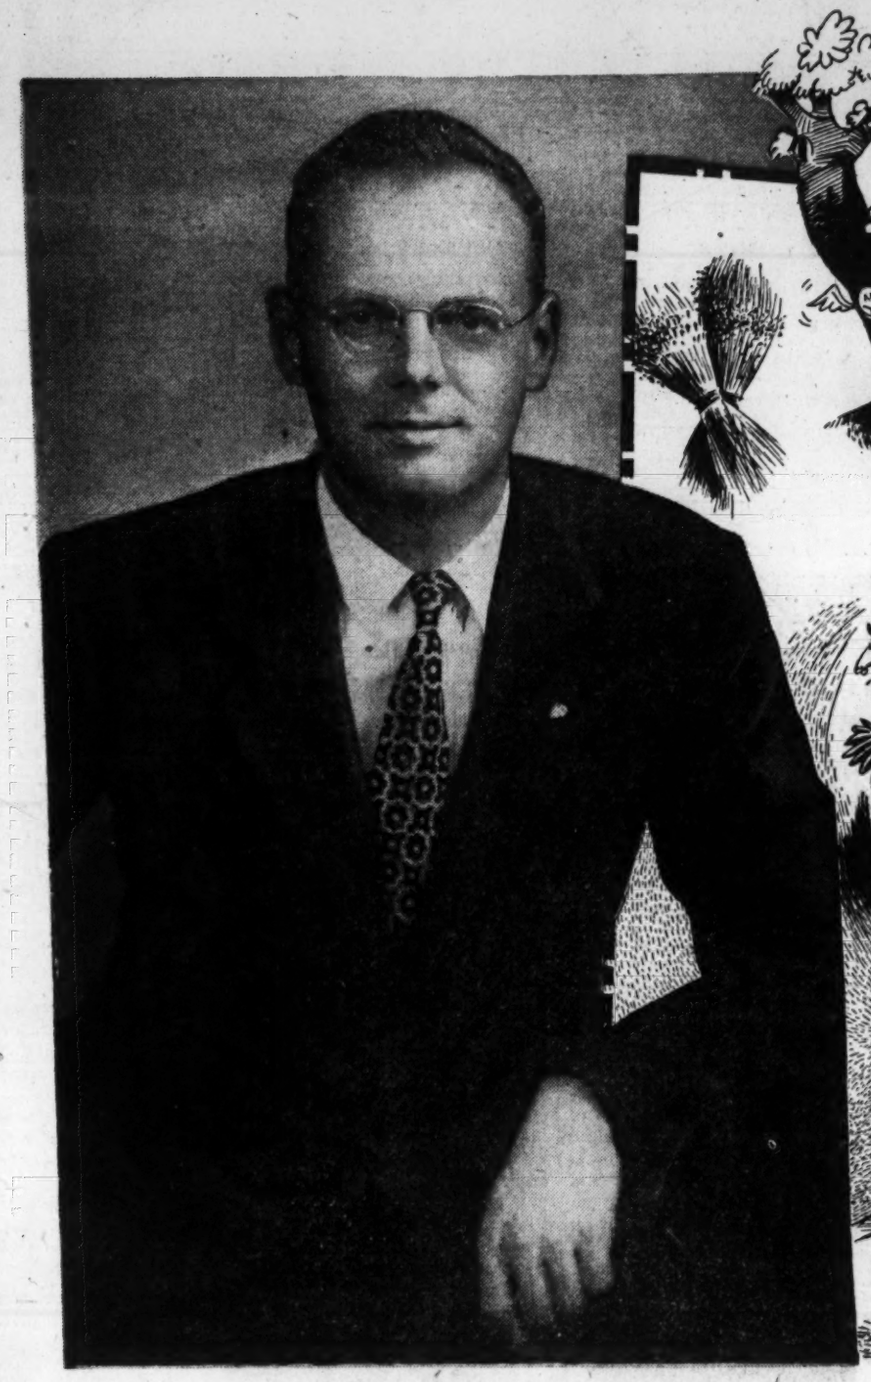
TWO STORES OF NATIONALLY FAMOUS MERCHANDISE



John O. Hjelle . . . Former managing editor of the Bismarck Tribune . . . has been in Washington for two and one-half years . . . as Administrative Assistant to Senator Milton R. Young.

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN NORTH DAKOTA . . . the Sioux state

North Dakota is a young State, where youthful vision and enterprise pay rich dividends for her half-million citizens. Fur traders were the first white men to visit the territory that is now North Dakota in 1738. Lewis and Clark wintered there in 1804-05 on their way to the Western ocean. Today, 144 years later, North Dakota is on the threshold of her greatest development. Sturdy, industrious farmers have moved in to replace the early-day rancher and bonanza wheat grower, whose holdings stretched as far as the eye could see. Clean, modern cities, founded upon agriculture and growing with industry, have a characteristic vigor and urbanity. The visitor to North Dakota finds a temperate climate and a healthful one. He finds a land which varies from the fertile black flat-lands of the Red River Valley to the wildly exotic panorama of the western Badlands, and from the gently rolling prairies dotted by grove-sheltered farm homes to the steep slopes of the forested Killdeer and Turtle Mountains. He finds there also the International Peace Garden on the Canadian border, only monument of the kind to lasting peace and understanding between two great Nations. He finds a land unexcelled for upland game and migratory waterfowl hunting. Above all, he finds himself among a friendly, hospitable people. North Dakotans in Washington appreciate the opportunity given them by The Hecht Company to tell a little about the State they proudly call home. North Dakota, a State whose beautiful new skyscraper capitol typifies its forward-looking progressivism, invites all America to share in its bounty and its future. There's a challenge for all in North Dakota, and an opportunity.

John O. Hjelle

President, North Dakota State Society

● NORTH DAKOTA . . . Endowed with millions of acres of some of the most fertile soil in the Nation . . . tremendous sources of water power . . . and rich veins of fuel and minerals. Her resourceful, industrious citizens are reaping the full benefit from the gifts of a bountiful Nature . . . supplying large quantities of foodstuffs to fill the Nation's larder.

● NORTH DAKOTA . . . Here, General George Custer started his fatal march to the Little Big Horn . . . where the Sioux Indians made one of their last stands against the advance of the white man. Sitting Bull, famous Sioux medicine man in the Battle of Little Big Horn, is buried on an Indian Reservation at Fort Yates.

● NORTH DAKOTA . . . Founder of the Little Country Theatre movement. North Dakota was the boyhood home of playwright Maxwell Anderson . . . of explorer-philosopher Vilhjalmur Stefansson . . . and the birthplace of Carl Ben Eielson, the first man to pilot a plane across the top of the world. The Theodore Roosevelt Memorial has been erected in the Badlands, where, in 1883, he went to regain his health on a North Dakota ranch. Sacajawea, a Shoshone Indian girl, from the Territory of North Dakota, gained fame . . . when, in 1805, she guided the Lewis and Clark Expedition to the Western ocean.

● NORTH DAKOTA . . . Whose outstanding record in agricultural production places her first in spring wheat . . . she produces approximately 50 per cent of all hard spring wheat . . . and 90 per cent of all the durum grown in the United States. Eighty-seven per cent of her rich, black soil is devoted to farming. North Dakota's Red River Valley, immortal in American folk song, is known as one of the rich bread baskets of the Nation. The State also is a leader in flax and in barley . . . is third in rye . . . fifth in potatoes . . . and sixth in oats. Millions of cattle, hogs and sheep graze on her lush prairie pastures. The food produced in North Dakota is carried to market by four transcontinental railroad lines . . . railroad transportation is one of the State's important industries.

● NORTH DAKOTA . . . Whose rich soil is underlaid with 600 billion tons of lignite coal . . . enough to satisfy U. S. needs for years to come, at the present rate of consumption. The Indians termed the Badlands "Bad Medicine," because of the mysterious fires from veins of lignite coal burning underground . . . fires which still smolder today. Her mineral reserves include vast stores of bentonite (used as a base in soap making) . . . sodium sulphate . . . and manganese ore. Perhaps her greatest natural resource is the mighty Missouri River . . . soon to be harnessed for power and irrigation by the Garrison Dam . . . the greatest earth-filled dam in the world. Nearby, the Missouri-Souris product will make possible the irrigation of a million acres of North Dakota soil.

● NORTH DAKOTA . . . Proud of the World's first international peace garden . . . built on the border between North Dakota and the Canadian Province of Manitoba . . . as a lasting memorial to goodwill between the peace-loving citizens of our two Nations.
